TeLinde's Operative Gynecology

e-Journals in biomedicine without 6- to 12-month embargo

We need better, easier more comprehensive online access to journal publications (pdfs for download), especially from off campus. Off campus access is very clumsy and poor. On campus access is very limited. The whole system is clunky and outdated. A better, more efficient, more comprehensive access system is necessary for research and teaching!! It is necessary for faculty to do their jobs, especially if we want to be a top tier University and to increase NIH funding!!!

Scanned pages of the in print journals available only at the library that could be accessed through the USF portal. I often do research at home and frequently can not access full articles in the USF library since they are only available in print at the library itself.

None

All Cell Press Journals with access to latest articles. This is important for graduate level Journal clubs and departmental seminars. e.g. Cell Stem Cell, Cell Metabolism etc are only available after 1 year, which is too old for writing grants and for conducting cutting-edge colloquiums.

Replacing DynaMed with Up-To-Date. Up-to-Date is more comprehensive, the information is organized in an easier to read fashion, and it's a superior product overall. Many other major campuses use it as well as teaching hospitals, therefore, it's a system we can carry with us into our training.

I attended a town hall meeting with Dean Petersen this semester. The main complaint on behalf of students in the Department of Epidemiology & Biostatistics was the lack of biostatistics texts, and that the ones that are currently in the library are outdated. More generally, public health students do not feel that there are many texts for our field.
