Objectives

- ❖ Discussing why open access is important in the field of education
- ❖ Identifying open access resources in education on the Web
- ❖ Illustrating future trends in open access publishing ventures
- ❖ Discussing caveats with open access

Why Open Access in Education?

- ❖ Closing the research-practice divide
 - See: Chronicle article about Stanford's College of Education's Decision
- ❖ 2008 NIH and other governmental mandates
 - All results of federally-funded work must be available to the public

The Desire of Faculty to Develop New Models of Scholarship

A reaction to traditional models of control & restricted access to information

Technology that enables users to do things they couldn't before

- Collaboration

- Free flow of information

- Supports distributed scholarship

Accommodating research that doesn't fit into traditional models

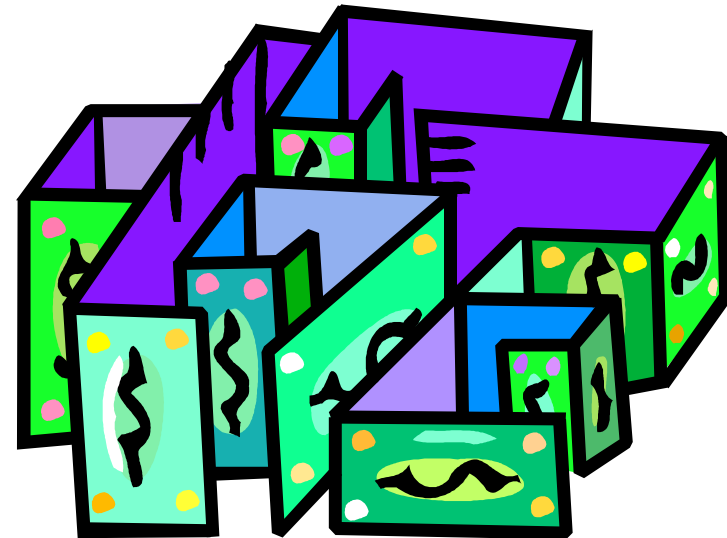

New Models of Scholarship

- ❖ Hacking the Academy book crowdsourced in one week, May 21-28, 2010.
- ❖ Walt Whitman Archive—edited online ‘volume’ of all Whitman’s works that are scattered in archives all over the world
- ❖ Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy—a pioneer open access authoritative reference work

Getting to Open Access Education Links

- ❖ Go to the library home page
- ❖ Under "Guides"
- ❖ Click on " Full Subject List A-Z"
- ❖ Next Click on "Education"
- ❖ Click on the tab that says
"Open Access."

The Faculty Point of View

What are the practices in a particular discipline?

How does the scholarly society(s) approach scholarly publishing and communication?

What's the culture in the department and college?

What are promotion and tenure requirements?

Caveats

- ❖ Predatory Publishing
- ❖ Beall's List of OA publishers to avoid
- ❖ Criteria for Determining Predatory Open-Access Publishers
