Carl Kasell Sleeps In

After 30 years, the beloved NPR newscaster retires from Morning Edition

For the past 30 years, Carl Kasell's distinctive voice has informed listeners of the day's top stories as the chief newscaster for NPR's Morning Edition. After setting his alarm clock for 1 a.m. for all of those years, Kasell has finally decided to sleep in. Last month he hung up his microphone and retired from his newscaster responsibilities. A veteran broadcaster with a career spanning more than 50 years, Kasell became a part-time NPR newscaster in 1975, and joined the staff full-time in 1977. He did the first newscast of Morning Edition in 1979 and has been a fixture of the program ever since. To tens of thousands of NPR listeners, it was Kasell who broke the news of such gripping events as the fall of the Berlin Wall and the terrorist attacks of Sept 11, 2001. But we have good news for area Kasell fans. WUSF 89.7 listeners will still get the chance to hear Kasell's soothing baritone voice every week. Kasell will carry on as the official judge and scorekeeper of NPR's weekly news quiz, Wait Wait...Don't Tell Me! aired on WUSF 89.7 every Saturday at 11 a.m. and on our HD channel, WUSF 89.7² at 1 p.m.

JANUARY TV HIGHLIGHTS

Stephen Fry in America, a six-part documentary series, is a snapshot of the United States as seen through eyes of this popular British actor, writer, comedian and author. As Fry visits the landmarks and distinctive sites of all 50 states, he shares his intriguing observations on the people, traditions and lifestyles he encounters. The result is an affectionate and poignant portrait of America. Airs Mondays, 10 p.m., beginning January 4.

Charlie Bird's Arctic Journey takes the celebrated Irish journalist on an odyssey that spans northern Canada, the North Pole and Siberia. Journeying by dog-sled, Ski-Doo, and nuclear-powered icebreaker, Bird encounters the unique cultures and critters of the ultimate north. His most chilling encounter is the visible threat of climate change to this beautiful and fragile region. Airs Thursday, January 7, at 9 p.m.

A Ripple of Hope explores one man's fateful decision on the night of the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. That same evening, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy kept his promise to speak in Indianapolis. Through his speech, Kennedy helped that city avert a riot, and the nation face up to its racial injustice. This documentary presents a profile of courage through interviews, archival imagery and re-enactments. Airs Friday, January 15, at 8 p.m.
