“Making Stuff”

Invisibility cloaks. Spider silk that is stronger than steel. Self-healing military vehicles. Smart pills and micro-robots that zap diseases. What will the future bring, and what will it be made of? In NOVA's four-hour series, Making Stuff, popular New York Times technology reporter David Pogue takes viewers on a fun-filled tour of the material world we live in, and the one that may lie ahead. Get a behind-the-scenes peek at scientific innovations ushering in a new generation of materials that are stronger, smaller, cleaner, and smarter than anything we've ever seen. “Few people realize it, but materials are the basis of our civilization—the Stone Age, the Iron Age—and materials are what will take us into the future,” says Paula S. Apsell, senior executive producer for NOVA. “David Pogue is a highly entertaining and tech-savvy guide during a fascinating four hours full of potential breakthroughs that will shape our future.” Aired Sundays at 8 p.m. beginning February 6.

FEBRUARY TV HIGHLIGHTS

Nature "Elsa's Legacy: The Born Free Story" 2010 marked the 50th anniversary of the publication of Joy Adamson's Born Free. Her book and the film adaptation changed the way we think about wildlife. Fifty years later, what's happened to the lions and people featured in the book and film? Find out in this Nature documentary. Airs Thursday, February 3, at 8 p.m.

Pioneers of Television This innovative series, narrated by Kelsey Grammer, explores the inception of some of television's most popular genres, including science fiction, westerns, crime dramas and local children's programming. Grammer interviews the stars and creators of these formats, which transported viewers to the past, present and future every week. Airs Saturdays at 8 p.m. beginning February 5.
