If we're looking at the same pagination, in the last full paragraph on page 230, paragraph begins "I remember as a child...." Last sentence in para begins "Margaret Bourke White caused a sensation...." What I have sent you replaces that sentence and continues the paragraph.

I've edited this slightly from what I sent earlier:

Margaret Bourke-White caused a sensation wherever she went, and as I was working on this book I began to wonder if Lieutenant Meyer had ever met the glamorous photographer. Then I found one of his missing wartime diaries. In an entry my father made late in December 1942 I found a reference to Scottish nurses whose ship had been torpedoed. A few pages on he mentioned having coffee with General Adkinson. No mention, though, of Margaret Bourke-White.
