Five Things to Know About USF St. Petersburg

Author to speak at Sembler Holocaust Museum

Lecture

The Boston Globe called Vera Gran: The Accused "a book of extraordinary depth and power," and the Washington Post said it is "a moving meditation on survival and morality." Polish author Agata Tuszynska (above) will discuss her book at 3:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 18, during the Debbie and Brent Sembler Florida Holocaust Museum Lecture at the University Student Center Ballroom, 200 6th Ave. S. It is free and open to the public. Vera Gran was one of the most famous singers in Poland when the Nazis invaded and sent her to the Warsaw ghetto and eventually to the Treblinka concentration camp, only to spend the rest of her life fighting accusations that she was a Nazi collaborator. During the lecture, Tuszynska will play recordings of Gran's musical performances.

Professor to discuss 'The Archaeology of Beer'

USF St. Petersburg Anthropology Professor John Arthur, Ph.D., (above) has spent years studying the caste system of the Gamo people in southwestern Ethiopia, which led to close examination of pottery from archaeological digs, prompting him to ponder the origins of beer. Arthur will discuss his circuitous research during a talk titled "The Archaeology of Beer: A Look from Ethiopia and Beyond," on Thursday, Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. at Weedon Island Preserve Cultural and Natural History Center, 1800 Weedon Drive NE, St. Petersburg. Did nomads settle down to grow grain for bread or to brew beer? Most researchers believe bread was the impetus, but Arthur says a growing body of evidence, including what he has collected in Ethiopia, suggests that beer came first. The talk is free and open to the public.

He will explain the project during an organizational meeting at The Dali Museum Theater on Thursday, Nov. 21 at 6 p.m. Beginning in January, LaFollette will meet monthly at USF St. Petersburg with interested members of the public to discuss the main points of each chapter, soliciting feedback from the audience.
