Abstract

This study investigated the Facebook posts made by presidential candidates Donald J. Trump and Joe Biden during the crisis that emerged after 2020 presidential election. The purpose of the study is to gain a better understanding of how crisis response is enacted via social media. This study's conceptual basis is the Social Crisis Communication Theory. The crisis, which is the focus of the study, was limited to the post-election process, which started with the allegations of Donald Trump alleged fraud in the election, after the 3 November 2020 US presidential elections, and especially to the process that resulted in the capital protests in January. 6. First, the concept of crisis was examined within the context of the Situational Crisis Communication Theory, and the significance of social media in crisis communication was highlighted. In the study, the leaders' official Facebook sites were analyzed for crisis. Within the crisis process specified in the study, 150 Facebook posts shared by Joe Biden, 241 Facebook posts shared by Donald J. Trump were analyzed within the framework of situational crisis communication theory, within which crisis cluster the leaders evaluated the crisis and what kind of crisis response strategy they developed, analyzed by quantitative analysis method. In addition, the themes of social media posts were analyzed in the context of political discourse and the reactions of the followers to the posts of the leaders were examined.

Chapter I: Introduction

We live in a world that is always changing, and crises are unavoidable. In fact, humanity has experienced events—famine, accidents, natural catastrophes, sicknesses, and inter-human wars—that have generated crisis states in society throughout history (Kanilmaz, 2021). The process of creating good communication is one of the most critical activities in crisis management. In this setting, assuming that a leader exists with effective communication within the context of the impact of the definition and concept of leadership on the public, it reveals that leaders play a critical role in the crisis process. Citizens demand excellent process management from the person they regard as a leader due to the nature of the crisis, especially in a social catastrophe that impacts broad groups of people. In this process, the leader, which in terms of the word implies directing, obtains prominence and exists as a person to whom people go for assistance in order to get out of this chaotic era that has come suddenly. The efficacy of leaders in the crisis management process is a highly essential aspect in the crisis response process, according to studies done within this framework (Liu et al., 2020).

Due to the creation of information gaps during times of crisis, the communication strategies chosen by leaders are critical. People want to see leaders who can assist them fill in the information gaps that develop during crises, so they can evaluate the situation and determine how to respond. Indeed, there have been numerous studies aimed at understanding what defines a crisis and how to minimize the harm caused by crisis events (Pillai, 2013).

In this sense, in parallel with the technological development, the communication channels used in the crisis communication process have also changed throughout history. In this context, especially within the framework of today's technology, as a result of the development of 2.0 technology, social media, which allows users to contribute material interactively, has gained importance in crisis management processes around the world in recent years (White, 2011).

Due to several unique qualities of this social media site, comparing crisis communication on Facebook to other social media sites has become more important. To begin with, most Facebook accounts are private, and their use is confined to one-way or mutual friend connections, aside from the features and variety of user demographics in the United States. Due to improved algorithmic content monitoring, information travels less freely on Facebook. As a result, people who have already "liked" a candidate's page become the candidate's primary audience for Facebook updates (Stier et al., 2018).

In this sense, Facebook has gained importance as a platform where leaders can communicate effectively with their masses in political communication and has become a platform where effective communication can be established during the crisis. In the recent crisis that emerged after the American Presidency election, Facebook has become a platform used in the crisis communication process.

To further understanding of how crisis response is enacted via social media, this study examines Facebook posts by Presidential candidates Donald Trump and Joe Biden, using the framework of SCCT, during the crisis that emerged on January 6 during the certification of the Electoral College vote in the 2020 presidential election.

Chapter II: Literature Review

Due to the increased demand for information during times of crisis, communication is critical in the process of collecting information, processing it, and eventually communicating it to the intended audience. Communication is one of the most crucial aspects of crisis management in this situation (Sturges, 1994).

Because it is informed by a range of disciplines, including public relations, risk management, communication, mass media, and business management, crisis management is classified as an interdisciplinary phenomena in terms of study and practice. Crises, according to Weick, are "extreme conditions that jeopardize organizations and their goals while also diminishing profitability" (1988, p. 305). The extent of the threat posed by crises, as well as the tactics created by organizations in response to crises, impact organizational strategy (Weick, 1988). The political crisis may be characterized as representatives of authority and politicians feeling impotent in the face of an unforeseen problem impacting the society they rule (Akyazi et al., 2014).

In this context, it is critical to look at the idea of crisis in a theoretical context first.

Theoretical Framework

W. Timothy Coombs (2006) defined crisis as a process in which an unpredictable event that threatens stakeholders' expectations can have negative consequences by negatively affecting the organization's performance.

Coombs' (1995) Situational crisis communication theory (SCCT) affords the theoretical basis for this examine and is constructed at the attribution concept posited through Benoit (1997). The concept of attribution is defined as the understanding of why unexpected events occur and cause challenges for institutions. Citations are, in essence, recognition at the records across the reasons of sure occurrences or the causal linkages made for the mounted ties among the activities in question (Coombs, 2004). In other words, the citations are about whether the event that caused the crisis was internal or external to the organization. According to the attribution theory, the concept of stability explains whether the cause of the crisis persists and changes within the process, regarding the way in which the events that cause the crisis occur. The controllability of the crisis is related to the evaluation of the ability and capacity of the main actor of the crisis to control this crisis process (Coombs, 2007). In this framework, the crisis type matrix was created by Coombs' method to crisis communication (Coombs,1995).

There are two conditions based on the matrix—compatibility of the matrix's dimensions with the attribution theory that feeds the crisis theory, and design of the dimensions in such a manner that distinct crisis typologies can evolve without entirely excluding one another. Internal-external and intentionality-unintentionality are two aspects that will satisfy with the stated requirements. The condition of intentionality and unintentionality; relates to the manageability component of attribution theory, whereas the internal and external distinction indicates the core of the responsibility principle in attribution theory (Coombs, 1995).

“SCCT has three key elements. These elements are crisis type, crisis response strategy decision and crisis response strategy implementation for the current situation” (Coombs, 2008, p. 243). “The main focus of the theory is the type of crisis. Because there is a parallelism between the type of crisis and the level of responsibility that the stakeholders put on the organizations. The extent to which the reputation of the person exposed to the crisis may be damaged can only be estimated by examining or analyzing the degree of responsibility placed on this organization by the stakeholders during a crisis. The negative impact that the crisis process can have on the reputation of this organization is a very important element in deciding what kind of response option to choose” (Coombs, 2008, p. 243).

In this context, Coombs (2004) identified three crisis cluster types, or general types of crises, in his situational crisis communication theory research: the victim crisis cluster, the accidental crisis cluster, and the intentional crisis cluster.

Crisis Clusters

The Victim Cluster

In crises where the institution is seen as a victim, very little responsibility falls on the institution through its stakeholders. The organization is visible through the stakeholders because the victim of the crisis is no longer the creator. Such crises cannot be managed through organization. In the cluster of victims, the organization is not always held responsible for the crisis; rather, it is portrayed as a sufferer. Natural disasters, rumors and rumors, violent acts of violence that may occur unexpectedly among employees, enter this group (Coombs, 2015).

The Accidental Crisis Cluster

“The crisis that the organization is responsible for unintentional is developed in exchange for an action that the organization did not do knowingly and willingly” (Coombs, 2008, p. 244). The crisis may be attributed to this group only to a very limited extent. Thus, the crisis is the result of occurrences that are beyond the organization's control, such as accidents caused by technological faults, product damage caused by technical flaws, and obstacles (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

The Intentional Crisis Cluster

In such crises for which the organization is responsible, the reason for the action that led to the event that caused the crisis originates from the organization. This kind of crises is the kind of disaster that stakeholders characteristic the maximum duty to the corporation, and this is the cluster with the highest responsibility when considering other crisis clusters. This set shows that accidents due to human error, and organizational errors, such as product damage and organizational inaccuracies due to human error, are thought to be intentional (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Crisis Response Strategies

The Situational Crisis Communication Model includes four possible response categories for the crisis response strategies identified by Coombs (2010). Crisis response methods are classified into four broad categories in the framework of situational crisis communication theory, three of which are primary (deny crisis response strategy, diminish crisis response strategy, and rebuilding crisis response strategy) and one secondary (bolstering strategy), which contains sub-strategies (Coombs, 2010).

Numerous studies have supported and extended understanding of the SCCT and the response strategies that influence crisis outcomes, The definitions of these strategies are provided below.

Deny Crisis Response Strategies

Within the scope of the denying approach, the organization attempts to demonstrate that it has no responsibility for the situation that has occurred. The denial technique includes sub-strategies such as attacking the accuser (blaming the individual or group that blames the organization for the issue), denial (denying the existence of the crisis), and scapegoat someone else (holding people or an authority outside the organization responsible for the crisis) (Coombs, 2010; Holladay, 2010).

Attack the Accuser

It is a response strategy in which the organization or person declared responsible for the crisis does not accept this responsibility and counterattacks against those who claim it (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Denial

Denial is a response strategy in which it is asserted that there is no crisis or that one is not responsible for the problem. Denial can also refer to the act of denying responsibility for the situation (Indiraswari et al, 2019).

Scapegoat

The organization, which is shown as responsible for the crisis in this strategy, does not accept responsibility within the scope of the institution and places the blame on individuals or groups from within or outside the institution. If the person whom the organization shows as responsible for the crisis is an employee of the institution, he will be punished in a way that can be seen by the public. If the person or group declared a scapegoat by the institution is outside the organization, it is emphasized that the main culprit is not the institution, and that the crisis has arisen due to the activities of these individuals or groups (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Diminish Strategy

The diminish approach seeks to lessen the organization's culpability for the crisis and/or the severity of the crisis by claiming that the problem was accidental (excuse strategy) and/or lowering public perception of the crisis's impact (justification strategy) (Holladay, 2010).

Excuse

Crisis supervisors reduce organizational duty through denying the aim to damage the agency or incapacity to manipulate a crisis-triggering occurrence (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Justification

The managers of the organization that is the subject of the crisis aim to minimize the overall damage caused by the crisis. In this kind of situation, it is a matter of re-creating the steps to be taken on how to manage the crisis (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Rebuilding Strategy

The rebuilding strategy, which comprises compensation (to recompense those who have been harmed by the crisis) and apology (to apologize by accepting full responsibility for the disaster), tries to positively modify stakeholders' impressions of the organization in crisis circumstances (Holladay, 2010).

Compensation

In the event of a crisis, the managers of the organization, who are the main actors of the crisis, offer things such as gifts and money to the victims of the crisis (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Apology

In the event of a crisis, the managers of the organization that is the subject of the crisis take full responsibility for the emergence of a crisis and apologize to the stakeholders affected by the catastrophe (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Bolstering Crisis Response Strategy

The fourth category of crisis intervention strategy proposed by the situational crisis communication theory to defend reputation is the bolstering approach. The bolstering approach aims to disseminate positive information about the organization by focusing on crisis victims (compassion method) and/or reminding of previous good actions (reminder strategy). In addition, in this crisis response method approach, there is a situation that the organization, which is the main actor of the crisis, is also victimized as a result of the crisis (Holladay, 2010).

Reminder

In this approach, the corporation, that is the concern of the crisis, reminds its stakeholders of the good, successful performance that the organization has finished within side the past (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Innovation

The managers of crises are responsible for praising stakeholders and/or reminding them of the company's successful performance (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Victimage

Stakeholders are reminded by crisis managers that the company itself is also affected by the ongoing crisis scenario (Indiraswari et al., 2019).

Implicit Denial

Given that the primary objective of crisis communication is to maintain and enhance company reputation, it is crucial to execute tactics suited to varying levels of responsibility allocation (Coombs, 2007). The implicit notion, which is a psychological word, may be described as the message sent by the crisis management by disregarding the crisis situation at this time. According to Dorpat (1983), denial may be both implicit and explicit, with implicit denial occurring far more often than the comparatively primitive protective behavior of public denial. It is a crisis intervention approach devised by the crisis manager within the context of crisis communication, in which messages are sent outside the crisis situation without addressing crisis. In this method, the issue is ignored by communicating other messages.

According to Coombs, since every crisis is unique, it is vital to create and implement a response strategy tailored to these characteristics (Coombs, 2007).

Examination of crisis communication on Facebook

Communication is a critical component of the crisis response process. Communication networks are successful across a broad variety of issues, from the onset of the problem to how many individuals are aware of this issue and how to react to it. In this regard, the communication network that was built through traditional media channels in the past has given way to social networking sites with the development of new media technologies today. Unlike traditional networks, social network settings are time and geographical independent, allowing more individuals to communicate about the situation. This new technology has impacted the way the organization, which is the crisis's actor, operates as a result of the environment it has created. With the effect of the environment it has created, this new technology has affected the way the organization, which is the actor of the crisis, will communicate with its target audience, as well as the crisis being heard by more people (Neeley and Colin, 2018). In this context, the fact that social media provides organizations with an opportunity for interactive and active communication with their target audience during all crisis situations means that the activities that organizations engage in during this process are not unilateral and may evolve as a response to the actions taken by those organizations. The use of social media, on the other hand, may make it possible for businesses to participate in an interactive communication process with the members of their target audience while simultaneously enabling the crisis to be heard and disseminated. As a consequence of this, one slip-up in this group dynamic might result in a whole new disaster (Borremans, 2010).

When the new media and conventional media are compared with regard to the degree of crisis communication, it is evident that social media has not altered the primary principles of communication that are to be carried out during the crisis (Coombs, 2014). According to White (2011), the use of social media in the process of crisis communication is highly significant since it allows for the sharing of information during times of crisis and makes the crisis communication organization as a whole more efficient. If the institutions that have been the focus of the dilemma are able to make good use of social networking sites, they will be able to associate with their respective target groups in a way that is both simpler and more efficient, which will allow them to win back the confidence they have lost.

In crisis communication research, there is a tendency to analyze and discuss social media as a homogeneous and general phenomenon (Haelein and Kaplan, 2010). Thus, it is erroneous to regard web 2.0 technologies as a homogeneous mass within the scope of the characteristics and purposes of social media platforms in the process of crisis communication. This is due to the rapid evolution of internet technologies (Erikkson and Olsson, 2016).

Among all social media networks, Facebook's unique features have made it important to evaluate crisis communication in the context of this platform. First of all, according to January 2022 figures, Facebook has been the most visited social media network with 2.91 billion monthly active users (Dixon, 2022).

In February 2022, Facebook attracted around 71.8% of all social media site visits in the United States, retaining its standing as the most popular social networking site by far (Statista Research Department, 2022). Also, Facebook has 241.22 million users in the United States as of 2022 (Degenhard, 2021).

Without a doubt, the element of Facebook that is of the greatest significance is the fact that it has the most reliable structure in terms of the correctness of user profiles (Akca et al., 2015). This is due to the fact that, at the very beginning of the principles of being a member of the online community, registration is made with a legit and used e-mail address, even the existence of which is known or can be guessed at. The reason for this is that in order to prevent fake accounts from being created on the site, real email addresses are required. The latter phases of Facebook's development were made more secure by the use of actual identities in closed-loop networking. People opted to join under their own names since it allowed them to grow their social networks without having to reveal their true identities (Akca et al., 2015).

In addition, Facebook allows users to use 63,206 characters in their posts. Compared to Twitter, which allows for 280 characters in length, Facebook users have the opportunity to say more with a single message (Seabrook et al., 2018). According to White (2012), the privacy settings that Facebook, as a social media network, makes available to its users are an additional significant component of the crisis communication process that the company employs. Experts in crisis communication and average individuals alike now have the ability, as a result of this setting, to tailor, develop, or conceal their material in accordance with the audience they have in mind.

The use of social media as a communication tool in a crisis was also seen after the American elections in 2020. The demonstrations, which started with Donald Trump's accusations of stolen elections, burst into a crisis on November 3, 2020, after the American presidential elections. Throughout the rise and continuance of this crisis, the leaders used social media to disseminate their views and exert control over the situation (Mason et al., 2020). Donald Trump and Joe Biden, who engaged in the election, used Facebook as a tool and were crisis leaders at this time.

Political speech on social media

The primary purpose of politics and political careers is to secure one's place in political life for an extended length of time and to amass political power. To somehow be recognized is the key requirement for entering the political landscape and maintaining a representation there. It is possible to be perceived appropriately and in the manner that one desires with the help of effective communication management (Steffens et al., 2021). To be regarded in the political arena, to organize people on their side, and to diminish popular support by degrading the opponent are the goals that politicians strive to achieve through their speeches. It gives an advantage over competitors by effectively managing communication in the following ways: monitoring public expectations; enhancing the effectiveness and durability of political messages sent; influencing opinion leaders; developing feedback mechanisms; and boosting the capacity to set the agenda (Wilson, 2005).

The idea that citizens, who make up the most vital component of the democratic system, are the ones who will ultimately decide who will represent them, who will run the system, and who will keep it running smoothly is one of the democratic system's most fundamental presumptions (Modero, 2020). Just as the most fundamental step in making a sale is to advertise the goods to potential buyers, people who are running for public office need to promote either themselves or their party in the same way that a product would need to be promoted to potential buyers. The name of this perspective in political communication, that is, the attempt of the leaders to introduce themselves to the citizens, is the political communication process (Bene and Farkas, 2021).

In this regard, the proliferation of new communication channels and social media contributes to an improvement in the interaction between political actors and members of society by making it possible for political actors to connect and engage with a more extensive audience (De Gregorio and Goanta, 2022).

In this context, social media has been an important promotional tool for Donald J. Trump and Joe Biden, who were candidates in the 2020 US Presidential Elections, to reach citizens. Between April 9 and October 25, 2020, Donald Trump allocated 47.30 percent of total ad spend, or $201,460,242 of a total ad spend of $426,263,134, to social media. Joe Biden, on the other hand, used 29.40 percent, that is, 166,118,753 dollars of the total advertising expenditure of 564,755,962 dollars, for advertisements in digital media (Project, 2020).

The involvement of politicians on social media has sparked many academic and journalistic scrutiny. While politicians have traditionally used their accounts to interact with voters or political opponents, they increasingly use their platforms to promote the interests of their supporters and communicate with their supporters through these platforms (De Gregorio and Goanta, 2022). According to Bajar (2017), in this way, the themes presented by the leaders to their followers through social media during the political speech process gain meaning in the political communication process. These themes can be summarized as:

Personal Life

Social media posts by leaders about their special interests and leisure activities can be categorized under the heading "Personal Life". In a biography, credentials, academic titles, etc., personal experiences may be presented alongside official activity. There are also posts proving that they are performing certain activities, such as praying (Bajar, 2017).

Election Campaigns and Political Advertisements

This category contains entries on campaign escapes. It also contains words that may inspire followers to vote for politicians, as well as political techniques such as the repeated use of slogans (Bajar, 2017).

Self-Descriptions

These include characterizations that have the potential to assist a person enhance their image and/or character. Posts contain events that improve rendering. An illustration of this might be an article or video that discusses the leaders in question and focuses on them directly (Bajar, 2017).

Experience in Government Service

It encompasses the individual's past as well as their present work in the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the government. It also encompasses situations in which a politician's previous or current government title, such as Mayor, Senator, or Secretary, is tied to their name in some capacity (Bajar, 2017).

Advocacies and Electoral Platforms

These are postings about an advocacy or platform that speculate when it may be possible to put those ideas into action after being elected to government positions. In addition, it illustrates personal activities and commitments currently underway and a proposal for their continuation in the post-election future (Bajar, 2017).

Quasi-Official Functions

It includes submissions proving their attendance at events organized by national or municipal governments, in addition to entries demonstrating their presence at other community events such as graduations and fiestas. During the course of their involvement, they were invited to serve as honored guests or speakers. Only those individuals who already have a government position are eligible to apply for it (Bajar, 2017).

Public Announcements

It contains notifications about recent news updates, a warning about an approaching catastrophe or disaster, and posts about the representatives of the country in international competitions. It consists of items that include connections to various news and media companies (Bajar, 2017).

Political Positions

It is made up of pieces that reflect perspectives from a variety of sources ranging from the local to the international level. These concerns may be related to a pressing problem that affects certain persons or groups, goods, international events, or other topics that are of widespread interest (Bajar, 2017).

Entertainment

These postings are intended to provide the viewers with enjoyment, entertainment, and/or amusement. There are entries here that include hilarious movies and images, regardless of whether or not they are related to politics (Bajar, 2017).

The Concept of Leadership in Crisis Situation

A talent that can be learned or taught and that can motivate others to engage passionately in the process of persuading others to direct their thoughts and actions toward predetermined goals is called leadership. Leadership is the process of convincing individuals to direct their thoughts and actions toward predetermined goals. It is one of the topics in human behavior that has received the greatest attention from researchers (Hinterhuber and Friedrich, 2002).

As a consequence of people living in close proximity to one another, the need to exercise authority over various groups in society gave rise to the concept of a leader. A person is regarded to be a leader if they are capable of having an influence on others as a result of the intrinsic motivation and personal traits that they possess. Leadership may be defined as a social influence process in which an individual strives to acquire the willing cooperation of subordinates in order to accomplish the objectives of an organization. This is done in order to demonstrate the leader's authority over the company. A person who may be defined as a leader is someone who can delegate tasks to others or influence the behavior of others in order to accomplish certain goals (Oc and Bashshur, 2013).

The issues, tensions, and challenges that are brought about by the crisis environment entail the need for more wisdom, and the challenging conditions that crises produce are essential in the process of developing leaders. It is very necessary for the successful management of a crisis to have leaders that possess distinct viewpoints and skills than those that are required by regular conditions when the situation is in a state of crisis (Turan et al., 2020).

Within the context of this paradigm, the attributes a leader must possess in order to handle a crisis effectively take on a greater relevance in terms of the necessary actions. Due to the fact that a person's surroundings and responses to them can vary significantly based on their personality characteristics (Mika, 2001).

In this context, according to Griebie and Immelmann's (2021) study on Biden's leadership traits, People with Biden's personality type have a greater propensity to utilize an interpersonal style of leadership that places an emphasis on flexibility, compromise, and teamwork. In the framework that Margaret Hermann (2002) established for analyzing leadership traits, it is claimed that Biden is a leader who respects limitations, is receptive to information, and is primarily motivated by a connection emphasis. This results in a collegial, accommodative leadership style that is focused on reconciling differences and building consensus. Because of his personality profile and the leadership qualities that are associated with it, Joe Biden's administration is likely to have a tone that is more conciliatory than combative. This could make him vulnerable to pressure from various interest groups and make him a barrier in negotiations or conflicts with other countries (Griebie and Immelmann, 2021).

According to the leadership profile derived from the research conducted by personality scientist Theodore Millon (1994) and presenting the findings of an indirect study, Donald Trump's dominant personality patterns are Ambitious/exploitative (a measure of narcissism), Extrovert/impulsive, and are infused with secondary traits of the Dominant/controlling pattern. According to the conceptual analysis done on Donald Trump, it was found that Trump is backed by a courageous or adventurous nature. This was the conclusion reached by the researchers (Griebie and Immelman, 2020). According to the findings of the study, the fundamental personality-based aspects of Trump's leadership style consist of the following: a general leadership style that is charismatic and non-negotiable; a highly dominant, extroverted, and effective foreign policy orientation; an active and positive presidential character; and the ability to wake people up, engage, and steer the public. In the Oval Office, Donald Trump's executive leadership style can be characterized as aggressive, competitive, and confident (i.e., ambitious); harsh and directing (i.e., dominant); impulsive and undisciplined (i.e., extrovert); and tradition that is destructively challenged by its tendency to eclipse the truth and avoid the law (i.e., daredevil) (Griebie and Immelman, 2020).

2020 United States Presidential Election Crisis

In the United States of America, presidential elections were held on November 3, 2020, between candidates Donald Trump of the Republican Party & Joe Biden of the Democratic Party. As a result of these elections, there were widespread demonstrations across the country, and in some locations, these demonstrations turned into riots. In the final round of voting, former US Vice President Joe Biden overtook 45 US President Donald Trump, with 81.3 million votes (51.3%) to 74.2 million votes (46.7%). Voting ended in the westernmost state of Hawaii, which cast its four votes for the Democratic Party candidate. As a result, Biden scored 306 votes, and the incumbent President Donald Trump – 232 (Presidential election results: Biden wins 2020). To win the presidential election, it is enough to collect at least 270 electoral votes (Board, 2022).

Joe Biden received more than 81 million votes, surpassing the previous record of 69.8 million votes established by former President Barack Obama. The 2020 presidential election received more votes than any previous election in U.S. history, demonstrating the largest voter turnout in more than a century. (NPR, President-elect Joe Biden reaches 80 million votes in a year of record turnout). It is projected that 66.5% of eligible voters participated in the election, the most since 1908 (Greve and Singh, 2020).

The U.S. Electoral College meeting on December 14 voted for the president in accordance with the expressed will of the voters in each state, confirming Biden's victory (Sonam and Shet, 2020). Trump refused to admit defeat, claimed that the election was falsified and that he had been the victim of electoral fraud (Beth LeBlanc, 2022).

Meanwhile, Trump supporters, notably the Proud Boys, demanded fair elections on the streets of towns and state capitals. In a bunch of areas (including Washington, DC) in November and December 2020, protests featuring Proud Boys who refused to admit President Trump's loss resulted in street brawls, scuffles with police, and numerous detentions (Landay and Gardner, 2020).

The United States Congress convened on January 6 to complete the handover of power. Senators and representatives were required to ratify the electoral vote according to which Joe Biden, a Democrat, was elected the new president of the United States. The incumbent president, Donald Trump, did not acknowledge the election results in that he was endorsed by thousands of people who assembled in Washington for the "Save America" event. People gathered at the Capitol walls and demanded that the results be deemed illegitimate. President Trump himself stated that the election was the most fraudulent in American history (Vazquez and Judd, 2020).

During his speech, the outgoing president urged rally attendees to advance to Congress (Petras et al., 2021). Trump's followers engaged in direct action by breaching the police barrier and entering the Capitol building. In a short period of time, the demonstrators were able to gain access to the building, the Senate conference chamber, and a number of the offices of high-ranking politicians. Inside, there were several conflicts between protestors and police enforcement personnel, which resulted in multiple injuries and the death of one lady, who was shot in the neck (Petras et al., 2021).

Additional police forces arrived at the Capitol to quell the protest and vacate the building. Moreover, by order of Trump, the National Guard forces were brought into Washington, which eventually allowed to resolve the situation and push the protesters away from the Capitol (Singman, 2021).

The fact is that the president at the rally called on his supporters "to help the Republicans defend fair elections. When the activists began to storm the Capitol, Trump almost immediately asked them to "protest peacefully and respect the work of the police". The current incident has drawn serious criticism of Trump, with opponents of the head of state accusing him of inciting unrest. Biden reacted to the actions of his opponent's associates more harshly. He called for an immediate end to the "siege of the Capitol" (Bartash, 2021).

Other prominent representatives of the Democratic Party also compared what was happening with a coup and demanded the introduction of the National Guard forces to stabilize the situation, which, in fact, the president did. In addition, the Dc authorities have imposed a curfew beginning at 6 p.m. local time, pledging to jail any violators (Singman, 2021).

Even the social media sites where he posted a plea to the demonstrators criticized Trump. The president encouraged the demonstrators to disperse while reiterating his claim of electoral fraud. As a result, Twitter disabled Trump's account for 12 hours, Facebook went even farther by restricting access to the president's page for a full day, and Instagram followed suit (Petras et al., 2021).

The takeover of the Capitol was, by American standards, an unparalleled occurrence. "Attacks on the land of the complex have occurred previously, but no one has witnessed such a large-scale assault for more than two millennia" - the last occasion the Capitol building was occupied was in 1814 by British troops (Holpuch, 2021).

Purpose of Study, research questions and hypotheses

All in this frame, in the study, firstly, the concept of crisis was examined within the framework of Situational Crisis Communication Theory, and the situation of the leadership concept in the crisis process and the role of social media in crisis communication were emphasized. The crisis, which is the subject of the study, was limited to the period, which started with the allegation of Donald Trump's alleged fraud in the election after the November 3,2020 American Presidential election, and especially to the process that culminated in the capital protests on January 6th. The aim of the study is to examine how the two leaders who received the most votes after the 2020 US Presidential Elections, Joe Biden and Donald Trump, evaluated the crisis over Facebook, according to Coombs' Situational Crisis Communication Model. In the study, the official Facebook pages of the leaders were taken as a sample as the area of crisis analysis. The purpose of choosing Facebook as the basis of the study is that as of January 2022, Facebook is the most popular social media platform with 179.65 million monthly active users in the United States, and has low a negative opinion of Facebook in the United States as of November 2021 (Published by Statista Research Department, 2022; Published by L. Ceci, 2022). In particular, with the platform providing users with the opportunity to give feedback with emojis, it will be possible to handle more concretely how users react to the interaction of leaders during the crisis. In this framework, the post-election Facebook posts of Joe Biden and Donald J. Trump will be examined in the context of situational crisis communication theory by content analysis method. The research questions and hypotheses of the research are as follows:

- RQ1: What types of crisis response strategies did political leaders Trump and Biden primary use during the 2020-21 post-election crisis?
- RQ2: What crisis cluster do the Facebook posts of leaders Trump and Biden represent?
- RQ3: How did the followers of political leaders, Trump, and Biden, react to Facebook posts in the context of comment count, reactions count and share count figures?

In addition, the following three related hypotheses are posited to be tested in this study.

- H1: Joe Biden used the Advocacies and Electoral Platforms themes more frequently than Donald Trump in his Facebook posts.
- H2: Donald Trump used the Self-Descriptions theme more frequently than Joe Biden in his Facebook posts.

H3: Joe Biden's posts received more positive reactions, while Donald Trump received more negative reactions.

Chapter III: Method

Content analysis is a scientific method for investigating social reality by categorizing, converting to numbers, and inferring the message contained in spoken, written, and other materials in terms of meaning and/or grammar. In the context of quantitative content analysis, the definition of content analysis includes breaking communication material into units, allocating each unit to a category, and keeping a scoreboard for each category (Rourke and Anderson, 2004).

In this context, quantitative content analysis method was used in the study. The crisis, which is the subject of the study, was restricted to the period, which started with the allegation of Donald Trump's alleged fraud in the election after the November 3, 2020 American Presidential election, and especially to the process that culminated in the protests in the capital on January 6th. The study's scope was limited to those aspects of the crisis.

In the study, by examining the posts shared by the two leaders on Facebook, it was aimed to examine firstly in which crisis cluster they evaluated the crisis process and how they would react to this crisis, how the followers of the leaders responded to these posts and on which themes the leaders interacted with their followers.

In this framework, it is aimed to examine RQ1 and RQ2 of the study within the framework of situational crisis communication theory. The RQ3 of the study, on the other hand, is aimed to be analyzed within the framework of the numbers of comments, shares, and reactions to the posts of the leaders. H1 and H2 of the study were aimed to be tested within the framework of the themes used by the leaders in their Facebook posts. H3 of the study, on the other hand, was aimed to be tested in the framework of the reaction numbers of the leaders from their followers.

The code book of the study was inspired by 2 studies which are Indiraswari, Kriyantono and Pia (2019) and Bajar (2017).

Data Collection

The data of the study are limited between November 4, 2020, and January 9, 2021 for Joe Biden, and between November 4, 2020 and January 6, 2021, because Donald Trump's Facebook account was suspended on January 6, 2021. In the study, 241 posts shared by Donald Trump and 150 posts shared by Joe Biden will be taken as data. The data was manually taken from the official Facebook accounts of Joe Biden and Donald Trump. Data on Donald Trump was collected on March 13, 2022, and data on Joe Biden on March 17, 2022.

Coding Sheets

Coding sheets of this study gathered data of:

- a) the leader who shared the post.
- b) the date of the Facebook posts.
- c) analysis of post content within the framework of type of crises
- d) total number of reactions, shares, and comments per post.
- e) number of different emoji replies to posts
- f) themes of posts

Coding Procedure

For the purpose of validating subjectively coded data in the field of mass communication research, intercoder reliability, also known as interrater reliability, is frequently employed as a standard method of content analysis. It is a measure of the extent to which independent coders arrive at the same coding decisions in evaluating the properties of messages, as stated by the definition that was provided for it by Lombard, Synder-Duch, and Bracken (2002). In light of the aforementioned information, conducting an evaluation of the intercoder reliability of the current study ought to involve a number of phases.

In the vast majority of cases, Krippendorff's alpha (α) is considered to be the most trustworthy metric of intercoder reliability. The formula for the overall value of the measure is as follows: $\alpha = 1 - D_o/D_e$, where D_o is the amount of observed disagreement and D_e is the amount of expected disagreement based on an interpretation of chance. Krippendorff (2004) states that when observers agree fully, observed disagreement $D_o=0$ and $\alpha=1$, which implies perfect dependability. $D_o=D_e$ and $\alpha=0$ demonstrate the lack of reliability when observers concur as though the results were due to chance. Krippendorff (2004, p. 241) states, " To interpret alpha, the alpha value must be greater than or equal to .800. Where provisional results are still allowed, the value of alpha should be greater than or equal to 667 for the lowest possible limit.

In this context, 25 % of the data of the study was coded by the second encoder. Before coding, the second coder, who has a PhD in Communication Sciences, was interviewed online to exchange ideas about the coding process and the theories that are the subject of coding. In this interview, the second encoder was trained about the coding process. In this framework, the relationship between the encoder and the second encoder is examined according to Krippendorff's alpha. According to this, agreement between both coders is 100% excluding 2 category. For all data encoded in this framework, Krippendorff's alpha value is 1.0000; It was .8631 for the category of Crisis Response Strategy for Joe Biden and Themes of Posts for Donald Trump.

When the findings regarding the calculated Krippendorff's alpha coefficient are examined, the Krippendorff's alpha coefficient values estimated to obtain the agreement between the scores of the two raters are between 0.86 and 1.00.

Joe Biden had the lowest fit in the "Crisis response strategy" category ($\alpha= 0.86$); Categories "Type of Crises", "Themes of Posts", "Comment", "Reaction, Share", "Like", "Love", "Haha", "Support", "Wow", "Anger" and "Sorry" The highest agreement was obtained for ($\alpha= 1.00$).

Donald J. Trump had the lowest concordance in the "Themes of Posts" category ($\alpha= 0.86$); "Crisis response strategy", "Type of Crises", "Comment", "Reaction, Share", "Like", "Love", "Haha", "Support", "Wow", "Anger" and "Sorry" categories The highest agreement was obtained for ($\alpha= 1.00$).

The coding within the framework of Krippendorff's alpha value satisfies the criterion of $\alpha \geq .800$.

Chapter IV: Results

Two distinct statistical analyses were utilized in the study's data interpretation, and each of these interpretations was carried out on the computer using the statistical package program SPSS for Windows 22.00. The interpretations were carried out in order to draw conclusions about the research's findings.

1. Chi-square analysis
2. Independent Samples t Test

RQ1: What types of crisis response strategies did political leaders Trump and Biden primary use during the 2020-21 post-election crisis?

Chi-square analysis was applied to compare the evaluations regarding the question and the findings are given in Table 1.

Table 1. Comparison of Trump and Biden Crisis response strategy

Crisis response strategy	Joe Biden		Donald J. Trump		Test and p
	N	%	N	%
Denial	6	4,0	6	2,5	$\chi^2=62,308$ $p=,000$

Reminder	5	3,3	0	0,0
Victimage	14	9,3	30	12,4
Implicit Denial	108	72,0	107	44,4

During the post-election, Joe Biden used 4% Denial, 4% Scapegoat, 5.3% Excuse, 2% Justification, 3.3% Reminder, 9.3% Victimage, 72% Implicit Denial as a crisis response strategy. Donald J. Trump used 2.5% Denial as a crisis response strategy, 31.5% Scapegoat, 9.1% Excuse, 12.4% Victimage, 44.4% Implicit Denial and the difference between them was statistically significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, while Joe Biden used Implicit Denial more as a crisis response strategy, Donald J. Trump used Implicit Denial and Scapegoat. See Figure 1.

Chi-square analysis was applied to compare the evaluations regarding the question and the findings are given in Table 2.

Table 2. Comparison of Trump and Biden in terms of Type of Crisis

Type of Crises	Joe Biden		Donald J. Trump		Test and p
	N	%	N	%
Victim Cluster	30	20,0	34	14,1	$\chi^2=55,625$ $p=,000$
Accidental Cluster	5	3,3	5	2,1
Intentional Cluster	6	4,0	90	37,3
Posts not directly related to the crisis	109	72,7	112	46,5

Joe Biden's Facebook posts represent 20% Victim Cluster, 3.3% Accidental Cluster, 4% Intentional Cluster, 72.7% Posts not directly related to the crisis cluster. Donald J. Trump's Facebook posts represent 14.1% Victim Cluster, 2.1% Accidental Cluster, 37.3% Intentional Cluster, 46.5% Posts not directly related to the crisis cluster, and the difference between them was statistically significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, Joe Biden's Facebook posts are more representative of Posts not directly related to the crisis cluster, while Donald J. Trump's Facebook posts are more representative of Posts not directly related to the crisis and Intentional Cluster crisis clusters. See Figure 2.

Within the framework of RQ1: What types of crisis response strategies did political leaders Trump and Biden primary use during the 2020-21 post-election crisis? and RQ2: What crisis cluster do the Facebook posts of leaders Trump and Biden represent?

Chi-square analysis was applied in order to understand whether the crisis response strategies used by Joe Biden in the framework of different crisis types during post-election protests, and the findings are given in Table 3.

Table 3. Comparison of crisis strategies used by Joe Biden in different crisis types

Note: Fisher's Exact Test was applied because the number of cells less than 5 exceeded 20%.

In the post-election period, Joe Biden used 20% Denial, 20% Excuse, 6.7% Justification, 16.7% Reminder, 36.7% Victim实施 as a response strategy in his Facebook posts, which he perceived as Victim Cluster. In the Accidental Cluster crisis, Biden used 20% Scapegoat, 40% Excuse, 40% Victim实施 as a response strategy. In the Intentional Cluster crisis, Biden used 83.3% Scapegoat and 16.7% Victim实施 as response strategy. In posts not directly related to the crisis, Biden used 0.9% Justification and 99.1% Implicit Denial as crisis response strategy, and the difference between them was statistically significant at $p<0.05$ significance level. See Figure 3.

What types of crisis response strategies did political leaders Trump and Biden primary use during the 2020-21 post-election crisis? and RQ2: What crisis cluster do the Facebook posts of leaders Trump and Biden represent?

Chi-square analysis was applied to understand whether the crisis response strategies used by Donald J. Trump in the framework of different crisis types during post-election crisis, and the findings are given in Table 4.

In the post-election period, Donald J. Trump used 2.9% Denial, 5.9% Scapegoat, 44.1% Excuse, 47.1% Victimage as a response strategy in his Facebook posts, which he perceived as the Victim Cluster. In the Accidental Cluster variant, Trump used 80% Scapegoat, 20% Excuse as an intervention strategy. In the Intentional Cluster, Trump used 1.1% Denial, 77.8% Scapegoat, 6.7% Excuse, 14.4% Victimage as an intervention strategy. In posts not directly related to the crisis, Trump used 3.6% Denial, 0.9% Victimage, 95.5% Implicit Denial as a crisis response strategy, and the difference between them was statistically significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. See Figure 4.

RQ3: How did the followers of political leaders, Trump, and Biden, react to Facebook posts in the context of comment count, reactions count and share count figures?

The t-test was applied to compare the evaluations regarding the question and the findings are given in Table 5.

Table 5. Comparison of Facebook followers' responses to political leaders

		N	Mean	Std. Deviation	Test and p
Comments Count	Joe Biden	150	12554,00	11053,862	t=-9,310 p=,000
	Donald J. Trump	241	61863,97	81021,644
Reactions Count	Joe Biden	150	120653,47	112001,033	t=-13,461 p=,000
	Donald J. Trump	241	411810,92	304292,995
Shares Count	Joe Biden	150	5384,65	6379,372	t=-9,343 p=,000
	Donald J. Trump	241	28122,68	36907,508

The arithmetic average of the number of comments Joe Biden received from his followers on his Facebook posts is 12554.00, and the arithmetic average of the number of comments Donald J. Trump received from his followers on his Facebook posts is 61863.97. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it was seen that Donald J. Trump received more comments on his Facebook posts. See Figure 5.

The arithmetic average of the number of reactions Joe Biden received from his followers to his Facebook posts is 120653.47 The arithmetic average of the number of reactions he received from his followers to Donald J. Trump's Facebook posts is 411810.92. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it was seen that Donald J. Trump's Facebook posts received more follower's reaction than Joe Biden's Facebook posts. See Figure 5.

The arithmetic average of the number of shares Joe Biden receives from his followers for his Facebook posts is 5384.65. The arithmetic average of the number of shares that Donald J. Trump receives from his followers for his Facebook posts is 28122.68. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it was seen that Donald J. Trump's Facebook posts received more followers than Joe Biden's Facebook posts. See Figure 5.

When the interaction of the leaders with their followers is examined proportionally within the framework of the number of followers, Joe Biden, who is followed by 11 million people on Facebook, interacts with his followers with 17.12% comments, 164.53% reactions and 7.34% shares. Looking at the reaction numbers, it was seen that 64% of non-Joe Biden followers interacted with Joe Biden's page.

Donald J. Trump, who is followed by 34 million people on Facebook, interacted with his followers in the form of 43.85% comments, 291.90% reactions and 19.93% shares.

H1: Joe Biden used the themes of Advocacy and Election Platforms more frequently in his Facebook posts than Donald Trump. and H2: Donald Trump used the theme of Self-Definition more frequently than Joe Biden in his Facebook posts

Chi-square analysis was applied to compare the evaluations regarding the hypotheses and the findings are given in Table 6.

Table 6. Comparison of Trump and Biden in terms of Themes of Posts

	Joe Biden		Donald J. Trump		Test and p
	n	%	n	%

Quasi-Official Functions	0	0,0	1	0,4
Public Announcements	31	20,7	99	41,1
Political Positions	40	26,7	100	41,5

During the post-election, Joe Biden used 1.3% Personal Life, 8% Election Campaigns and Political Advertisements, 2% Self-Descriptions, 41.3% Advocacies and Electoral Platforms, 20.7% Public Announcements, 26.7% Political Positions themes in his Facebook posts. Donald J. Trump used 2.9% Personal Life, 4.1% Election Campaigns and Political Advertisements, 5% Self-Descriptions, 5% Experience in Government Service, 0.4% Quasi-Official Functions, 41.1% Public Announcements, 41.5% Political Positions. The difference between them was statistically $p < 0.05$. significance level was found to be significant. As a result, while Joe Biden used Advocacies and Electoral Platforms more in his Facebook posts, Donald J. Trump used Public Announcements and Political Positions. See Figure 6.

“H3: Joe Biden's posts received more positive reactions, while Donald Trump received more negative reactions.” The t-test was applied to compare the evaluations regarding the question and the findings are given in Table 7.

The arithmetic average of ‘Likes’ for Joe Biden's posts is 93040.37, and the arithmetic average of ‘Likes’ for Donald J. Trump's posts is 329163.30. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it has been seen that the number of ‘Likes’ received by Donald J. Trump's shares is higher than Joe Biden’s. See Figure 7.

The ‘Love’ arithmetic average of Joe Biden's posts is 24876.98, and the ‘Love’ arithmetic average of Donald J. Trump's posts is 60224.24. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it has been seen that the number of ‘Love’ received by Donald J. Trump's shares is higher than Joe Biden’s. See Figure 7.

The 'Haha' arithmetic average of Joe Biden's shares is 914.04, and the 'Haha' arithmetic average of Donald J. Trump's shares is 7374.85. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it has been seen that the number of 'Haha' received by Donald J. Trump's shares is higher than Joe Biden's. See Figure 7.

The arithmetic average of 'Support' received by Joe Biden's shares is 1753.66, and the arithmetic average of 'Support' received by Donald J. Trump's shares is 2863.66. The difference between them was found to be insignificant at the $p > 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it has been seen that the number of 'Support' received by Donald J. Trump's posts is similar to the 'Support' received by Joe Biden. See Figure 7.

The 'Wow' arithmetic average of Joe Biden's posts is 115.38, and the 'Wow' arithmetic average of Donald J. Trump's posts is 2147.17. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it has been seen that the number of 'Wow' received by Donald J. Trump's shares is higher than Joe Biden's. See Figure 7.

The 'Anger' arithmetic average of Joe Biden's shares is 316.58, and the 'Anger' arithmetic average of Donald J. Trump's shares is 9635.67. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it has been seen that the number of 'Anger' received by Donald J. Trump's shares is higher than Joe Biden's. See Figure 7.

The arithmetic average of Joe Biden's posts, 'Sorry' is 191.80, and the arithmetic average of Donald J. Trump's posts is 'Sorry' 2841.60. The difference between them was significant at $p < 0.05$ significance level. As a result, it has been seen that the number of 'Sorry' received by Donald J. Trump's shares is higher than Joe Biden's. See Figure 7.

When the interaction of the leaders with their followers is analyzed proportionally within the framework of the number of followers, it is seen that the posts of Joe Biden, followed by 11 million people on Facebook, received a total of 17,687,603 million like and love reactions, and a positive reaction rate of 160.80% within the framework of positive reaction. The number of 'anger' reactions received by Joe Biden's posts was 47487, and when looked at proportionally, it was seen that Joe Biden's posts received a negative reaction rate of 0.43%.

The posts of Donald Trump, whose Facebook page is followed by 34 million people, received a total of 93,842,399 likes and love reactions, and it was observed that he received a positive reaction rate of 276.01% within the framework of positive reactions. It was seen that Donald J. Trump's posts received a negative reaction at a rate of 6.83%.

Chapter V: Discussion

The difficulties and problems that it brings with it in the crisis environment and the knowledge gaps it creates on the public add a different meaning to the steps to be followed by the leader in the crisis period and increase the importance of the concept of leadership (Kim, 2021). In this context, the posts that presidential candidates Donald J. Trump and Joe Biden made on Facebook during the crisis that emerged after the 2020 presidential elections were examined. Additionally, how the leaders evaluated the crisis process, which crisis response strategies they used, and on which themes they used while making leadership presentations on social media are considered.

In the 10-week crisis period analyzed in the study, it is seen that Donald J. Trump used social media more actively in the frame of 150 posts shared by Joe Biden, against Donald J. Trump's 241 posts.

In the framework of RQ2, in which how leaders perceive the crisis in this process and within which crisis cluster they are evaluated, it is seen that Joe Biden does not evaluate the process as a 'crisis situation' in general. Joe Biden did not touch on Donald Trump's post-election claims by making posts that are not directly related to the crisis in general. 72.7 % of Joe Biden's posts are posts that are not directly related to the crisis. It is seen that Joe Biden, on the other hand, defines the situation as a crisis in 27.3 % of only Facebook posts. In addition, 20% of Joe Biden's posts are evaluated in the Victim Cluster. In this context, it is seen that Joe Biden made posts stating that he was a victim when he perceived the crisis process and that he was not responsible for a crisis.

Donald Trump, on the other hand, referred to the crisis in 53.5% of his posts. Donald Trump, who evaluated the crisis within the context of the Intentional Cluster with a rate of 37.3%, argues that mostly human errors or organizational mistakes are made intentionally.

Evaluation of RQ1 gains more meaning by testing RQ2 and Hypotheses. In the framework of RQ2, where crisis response strategies were asked, it is seen that Joe Biden used the Implicit Denial response strategy more. Biden used SCCT crisis response strategies in only 28 % of his posts. In these strategies, 9.3 % preferred the victimage crisis response strategy. Joe Biden, who made social media posts that included the Implicit Denial response strategy at a rate of 72 %, preferred to reject the crisis by sharing outside the crisis in a crisis situation. Joe Biden's posts mainly included the steps he will take during his presidency.

On the other hand, Donald Trump used SCCT crisis response strategies in 55.6 % of his Facebook posts. Among the SCCT crisis response strategies, Trump used the scapegoat response strategy the most with 31.5 percent and blamed others for the crisis situation.

Situational Crisis Communication Theory looks at how the responsibility given to an organization during a crisis affects how the organization responds to the crisis. In this context, it is an important part of the theory to make a crisis response strategy based on the type of crisis (Kim and Zhang, 2016). When Joe Biden is analyzed in this context, he mostly used the victimage, denial, excuse and reminder response strategies, respectively, in the Facebook posts that he perceived as the Victim Cluster of the crisis process. In Accidental and Intentional crisis types, Biden again mainly used the excuse and victimage crisis response strategy. On the other hand, Donald Trump, like Joe Biden, used the victimage and excuse crisis response strategy in his Facebook posts, which he perceived as victim cluster, respectively. Evaluating the process within the Accidental and Intentional crisis cluster, and sharing more, Trump used the most scapegoat, excuse and victimage crisis response strategy in parallel with the theory.

Considering the number of comments, shares and reactions received by the leaders in the framework of the RQ3. It is seen that Donald Trump is more engaged and interacting with his followers.

When Joe Biden's approach is examined in the context of questions 1 and 2, it is seen that Joe Biden ignores Donald Trump's allegations of election fraud and focuses more on future projects with the feeling of being elected president. In this framework, the test results of H1 also reinforce RQ1 and RQ2. According to the H1 results, the theme Joe Biden used the most in his social media posts was Advocacies and Electoral Platforms with 62 %. Donald Trump has never used this theme.

In the framework of Hypothesis 2 tested within the framework of themes, it is seen that Donald Trump uses 2 percent more self-definition themes compared to Joe Biden.

When H3 was tested, when the arithmetic average of the emoji reactions received by both leaders was considered, it was seen that Donald J. Trump's posts received more emoji than Joe Biden. If the Like and Love, which is stated as a positive reaction, and the 'anger', which is stated as a negative reaction, are evaluated for both leaders in this framework, Donald Trump has received more positive and negative reactions compared to Joe Biden. In this context, it is seen that Donald Trump's page is more active in the crisis communication process.

Considering the personality traits of both leaders, it has been determined that the leaders' crisis perception and response strategies overlap. When the crisis management of Donald Trump is examined within the framework of his extremely dominant, outward-looking and effective foreign policy orientation and his ability to direct the public, Trump came to the fore with the allegation of fraud in the election right after the election and he more intensely claimed that there was an organizational mistake from the outside and targeted others in this framework in his crisis response strategies. Joe Biden, on the other hand, defined the process more as victim cluster type crisis after the election, in parallel with his compromise personality, and talked about his future projects without even mentioning the allegations of election fraud in the process until the Capital City Protests.

Limitations and future suggestions

The study focused on the sharing of the two leaders during the crisis over Facebook. The study also focused on the period after the capital protests for Joe Biden, but data could only be collected for Donald Trump until January 6, 2021, as Facebook suspended Donald Trump's account. The most important limitation of the study is the absence of Donald Trump's data, especially after this period when the crisis reached its peak. In addition, only Facebook was emphasized in the study.

When examined in this framework, it can be examined through different social media accounts to examine the crisis approaches of leaders through social media for future studies. Also, for future studies, this crisis can be examined again through traditional media. The concept of implicit denial can be explored in depth and another crisis concept can be examined within the framework of this perspective.

In addition to reactions, comments and shares, the impact of the shares can be measured with a quantitative survey study.

Conclusion

Despite its limitations, this study shows how situational crisis communication is managed by leaders in social media and how social media is used by leaders in times of mass crisis. Situational Crisis Communication Theory is a theory that examines the relationship between the responsibility attributed to the organization in crisis situations and the response of the organization to the crisis and focuses on the effects of these dynamics on organizational reputation. In other words, creating the crisis communication strategy according to the crisis type really provides significant benefits to the organizations (Kim and Zhang, 2016). In this study, rather than the study of Situational Crisis Communication Theory through general companies and institutions, the election process in a democratic country and the leaders in this process are discussed as a field of study. In this context, the evaluation of the 2020 elections, the impact of which will be understood more in the historical process, within the framework of the situational crisis communication theory and the self-presentations of the leaders in the social media can lay the groundwork for future studies and may be useful for crisis communication.

When the research questions and hypotheses of the study were examined within the framework of the situational crisis communication theory, it was seen that Joe Biden saw the crisis as Victim Cluster right after the elections, and after the capital rebellion, he defined the crisis as the Intentional cluster and connected the events that caused the crisis to Donald Trump. In this framework, he created the response strategy according to the crisis type by using the bolstering response strategy until the capital riots in the context of SSCT. At the time of the capital riots, using the scapegoat response strategy, he blamed the crisis on people outside the group and Donald Trump, who made allegations of election fraud. In addition, he ignored the crisis and focused on his post-election studies, rejecting Donald Trump's allegations of election fraud that caused the crisis, and talked about his actions as the elected president.

Donald Trump, on the other hand, defined the crisis mostly within the framework of the Intentional crisis response strategy and by using the scapegoat response strategy the most in the context of SSCT, he shifted the responsibility for the crisis to people outside the group and gave the message that the crisis environment was created due to fraud in the election.

In addition, the crisis intervention strategy obtained in the study, called 'implicit denial', suggests that even a leader's message outside of a crisis is a crisis intervention method during a crisis. In this context, the leader gives a message to his citizens without touching the crisis situation. When the theme of social media shares made in this context is examined, this method gains even more meaning.

2= Accidental Cluster

3= Intentional Cluster

4= Posts not directly related to the crisis

- The victim cluster: this cluster has a low level of responsibility attribution to the crisis. This shows that organizations are as the victims of an event, such as natural disasters, workplace violence, rumors, and so on;

- The accidental cluster: this cluster has a minimal level of responsibility attribution to the crisis. This shows that the events which cause the crisis occur accidentally and are out from the control of the organization, such as accidents due to technical errors, product damage due to technical errors, and challenges;

- The intentional cluster: this cluster has the highest level of responsibility for crisis. This shows the existence of organizational errors is considered done intentionally, such as accidents due to human error, product damage due to human error, and organizational misdeeds.

- Posts not directly related to the crisis: Posts shared during the crisis that are not directly related to the issue of the crisis.

Crisis response strategy:

1= Attack the Accuser

2= Denial

3= Scapegoat

4= Excuse

5= Justification

6= Compensation

7= Apology

8=Reminder

9= Ingratiation

10= Victimage

11= Implicit Denial

- Attack the accuser: crisis managers face the people or groups of people who think something is wrong with the organization;
- Denial: crisis managers insist that there is no or no crisis;
- Scapegoat: crisis managers blame people or groups of people outside the organization for the crisis;
- Excuse: crisis managers minimize organizational responsibility by denying the intention to harm the organization and / or inability to control a crisis-triggering event;
- Justification: crisis managers minimize the damage felt by the crisis. In this case rebuilding the crisis response strategy;
- Compensation: crisis managers offer money or other gifts to victims;
- Apology: crisis managers show a sense of full responsibility for the occurrence of a crisis and ask for apologize from stakeholders.
- Reminder: remind stakeholders about the good performance of the organization in the past;
- Innovation: crisis managers give praise to stakeholders and or remind them of good performance by the company;
- Victimage: crisis managers remind stakeholders that the position of the organization is also a victim of the crisis.
- Implicit Denial: It is not directly related to the crisis, but during the crisis, it is possible to ignore the crisis by touching on other issues.

They were so far off in their polling, and in their attempt to suppress - that they should be called out for Election Interference. ABC/WaPo had me down 17 points in Wisconsin, the day before the election, and I WON! In Iowa, the polls had us 4 points down, and I won by 8.2%! Fox News and Quinnipiac were wrong on everything. The worst polling ever, and then they'll be back in four years to do it again. Why haven't they deducted all of the dead people who "voted", illegals who voted, non Georgia residents who voted, and tens of thousands of others who voted illegally, from the final vote tally? Just a small portion of these votes give US a big and conclusive win in Georgia. Have they illegally destroyed ballots in Fulton County? January 6th when the Electoral College vote will be formally counted is just a few days away...yet how much do you even know about January 6th and the congressional mechanism in place? The mainstream media doesn't talk about it. They prefer that the Joe Biden presidency be considered a done deal.
