Hi, everyone. I have been writing a series of article for the In Depth Genealogist online magazine, and have gotten some pretty good leads. I am looking for some more items to write about if you are a member of a society, or know of one which is doing a genealogically related project in lieu of the pay web sites or others like Familysearch, do let me know or pass on the information. Libraries and historical societies, town historians etc are also fair game. I am particularly interested in those groups creating local information of photos, community databases, and the like which will be made available for the public.

Thank you!

Hello List,
I am seeking recommendations for Booksellers or Book Auction Houses who will come to my library in Abington, MA and make 800-1000 books go away.? If possible, we would like earn a few pennies off of them instead of just pitching them into the recycling bin, which will happen if we can't find a bookseller. Many of the titles are not rare or unique so an antiquarian bookseller is not a good fit.

Someone mentioned National Book Auctions ages ago on this list, but I think it was for those who wanted to shop through them. Has anyone ever had any experience selling with them? They say they do it all on their site, from soup-to-nuts, and that's what we want.?

Before you just recycle them you might offer them as a bulk grouping on Ebay. I worked as an independent bookseller in the past and there are many similar booksellers who would be interested in historical books and references for their small businesses. You could even specify that they must be picked up onsite, or arrange for shipping themselves. These booksellers would never know what was available unless it was listed in a venue they frequented, but it could bring a good return for you.

We have a bookshelf with books offered for sale and it brings in a lot of revenue. Also, when the town has a local sidewalk sale we put out carts and tables and have a huge turn-out. The money goes through our Friends of the Library.

We have developed a relationship with a local used (not antiquarian) book dealer who comes by about once a year and buys our extras. We found him when I put a listing for a used book sale on Craigslist (several dealers showed up to the sale and bought a few books, but this guy is willing to write a check and make all the books go away.)

Fairfax County Public Library's Virginia Room has more books to trade. Please respond to our volunteer, Fran, at Bfm1010 at cox.net and Frances.Millhouser at fairfaxcounty.gov . Be sure to include your mailing address in your email so that we can make your mailing label. There's an Excel and a pdf version of the same list, so I hope everyone will be able to open it.

If you don't have anything to trade, please send a check for postage reimbursement (made out to to City of Fairfax Regional Library) to

Laura Wickstead
Virginia Room
10360 North St.
Fairfax, VA 22030

Trades are allotted on a first-come, first-served basis. The volunteer will include a ?packing list? of your requests in your shipment with a check mark indicating that the book is included in the shipment, or an N/A meaning that the item is Not Available because someone else?s request was received before yours.

I noticed yesterday that the buttons on the census images in Ancestry Library Edition are not loading correctly, and the print button seems to have disappeared. Is anyone else having this problem, or is it just me?

I noticed this a few weeks ago, I think. It's so exasperating. Most of our patrons are not computer-savvy and need the obvious image of a printer. I've been called over to help find the print button many times lately. Took me a couple of looks to find it the first time myself even though I recognized the ?Tools? icon because I didn't think of a printer as a tool.

AND, where are the county names on the U.S. Census? Many are just giving the enumeration district names or numbers. For many of those in rural areas, that's the only time it's used. There's no town name to correspond with many of the township names. I just tried to look up a name in McNairy County, Tennessee. Had to go all the way to the image of the actual census to find out the county number. This greatly hinders the search. I was taught and teach all my students to ALWAYS include the county name since that's how many records are located.

Does anyone know if Newspaper Archives changed their website so that it now asks you to open or save the document before the page comes up on the computer. Mine computer is now coming up in PDF and I have lost the search box that was on the left hand side. Wondering if this is a program change or if someone changed the setting on the computer. If so, do you know what setting might have been changed?

Hi Karen;

I checked newspaperarchive.com and newspaperarchives.com (with an 's' - that brings you to genealogybank.com.) I'm not sure to which, if either, you were referring. There are a few with similar titles.

However, I was able to open articles on both sites without having to do anything special. I just clicked on the heading that gives the newspaper title and date.

I found over the years that the page you get for NewspaperArchive depends on the

How a PDF opens (or doesn't) depends on which browser you use, and on its settings. This is the Adobe reader help page on the topic: https://helpx.adobe.com/acrobat/using/display-pdf-in-browser.html

This one page is not the full story. It has links to other pages with even more details for specific browsers. :-(

Drew,

How firm is Librarians Day for May 3rd, and what do you know about the DNA workshop sponsored by FLA scheduled for that day?

Dave

Although ProQuest has always sponsored the lunch and related expenses at Librarians' Day events, the contents of the presentations is usually scheduled by a volunteer.

For NGS in Florida next year, that volunteer is me (I was also responsible for Librarians' Day at NGS in Charleston a few years ago), and I would love to see many of you join us at that event.

Once again, I have more treasures to offer! I found some stuck away in a cabinet that were never accessioned but were duplicates. The last 4 listed are periodicals from far West Texas.
Just email me with an address and which items you would like for your collection.

* Chickasaw By Blood Enrollment Cards, 1898-1914, vol. 1
* 1770-1790 Census of the Cumberland Settlements compiled by Richard Carlton Fulcher
* Collin County (Texas) Cemetery Inscriptions, vol. 2
* Wayne County, Tennessee Abstracts of Deed Records, 1820-1839
* Jamestowne Ancestors, 1607-1699 by Virginia Lee Hutcheson Davis
* Abstracts of Old Ninety-Six and Abbeville District Wills and Bonds
* Maryland Marriages, 1778-1800 compiled by Robert Barnes
* Marriage, Death and Legal Notices from Early Alabama Newspapers, 1819-1893
* History of Tennessee Illustrated: Giles, Lincoln, Franklin, and Moore Counties
* Early Settlers of Alabama by Col. James Edmonds Saunders. (c)1961

For any librarians on this list in the greater Washington area (VA, MD, DC, DE, PA, WV) please note that the DAR will be closed on Wednesday, September 23, 2015, because we will be within the security perimeter of the White House during the visit of Pope Francis to Washington. We will resume normal hours the next day, Thursday, September 24.

Attached is a sign that we would appreciate having posted in areas where genealogist frequent to help prevent visitors from showing up here and not being able to even get close to the building.

Eric,

I should be able to get a couple up at Archives I and probably one in the researcher locker room at Archives 2.

Once again, I have more treasures to offer! I found some stuck away in a cabinet that were never accessioned but were duplicates. The last 4 listed are periodicals from far West Texas.

Just email me with an address and which items you would like for your collection.

Chickasaw By Blood Enrollment Cards, 1898-1914, vol. 1

1770-1790 Census of the Cumberland Settlements compiled by Richard Carlton Fulcher

Collin County (Texas) Cemetery Inscriptions, vol. 2

Wayne County, Tennessee Abstracts of Deed Records, 1820-1839

Jamestowne Ancestors, 1607-1699 by Virginia Lee Hutcheson Davis

Abstracts of Old Ninety-Six and Abbeville District Wills and Bonds

Maryland Marriages, 1778-1800 compiled by Robert Barnes

Marriage, Death and Legal Notices from Early Alabama Newspapers, 1819-1893

History of Tennessee Illustrated: Giles, Lincoln, Franklin, and Moore Counties

Early Middle Tennessee Marriages (2 vol.)

Early West Tennessee Marriages (2 vol.)

Early East Tennessee Marriages (2 vol.)

History of Palo Pinto County, Texas

Western Link (Scurry Co., TX) 2 vol. (1971-1982)

Threads of Life (Dawson Co., TX) 2 vol. (1979-2000)

Some of you may know Ann McFadden from Miami. For many years she indexed obituaries, cemeteries, probate, newspapers, military discharge papers, funeral homes, voter lists, births, adoptions, naturalizations and marriage records. They are excellent indexes. She was very meticulous in all that she did. I believe these are better than anything online.

We have unbound copies of her manuscripts and would like a library to take and bind them. We already have two copies of each.

If you are willing to pay postage for them, we will have them shipped.

Dear All:

Regarding indexing local history from the local newspaper: We used to index local articles on index cards. Then, we started adding them into our online catalog. This is a time-consuming and tedious process which tends to make searching in the online catalog also a little tedious. I have been continuing this practice. But, we also have access to full-text newspaper articles through the Gannett database, provided by NovelNY. It's a dependable resource, funded in a stable manner, and is not likely to disappear overnight. Is there any benefit to continue adding local articles to our online catalog? What have others done? Any insight you can provide is appreciated.

Just in passing, my old library subscribes to Gannett/Novel NY. It only goes back to Dec 2002 for our local paper (and when I retired 4 years ago it only went back to 1999). So right then and there we are losing ground. Card files we put online go back to 1818; there are 500,000 of them. We used to (note past tense) cut and file the papers from 1936-2012; there are 5 million clips in those. From 2012 to present we have nothing but what is currently available from Gannett, and you know that is going to go away as soon as the library cannot afford it.

It is of great benefit to continue to add items to your catalog. As you are from NY state, you might consider participating in New York Historic Newspapers or Fultonhistory.com. Several local libraries have gotten their holding digitized and OCR'd by them, even in cooperation with local colleges. Tersely, I do not trust Gannett/Novel NY to always be there.

Thanks for the responses on digitizing local history from the newspaper.

I will continue to add articles to the catalog. I agree, however, that digitization is the way to go. I have been attempting to begin a project with NY Historic newspapers and/or the DPLA (they have a video on how they will help you digitize your newspapers, but when I called, they pointed me to NY Historic Newspapers, which accepts my already digitized images.) However, I do not have master reels of microfilm. If I digitize my used microfilm copies, the image quality will be compromised.

We have looked into vendors to digitize our reels, but they would be out-of-house for far too long (a few months) and the OCR is horrible. I didn't know that one could partner with fulton history. That would be ideal.

Any ideas on how to get master reels for a high-quality project, or tips on starting a digitization project in-house? I'd like to digitize, but would like highest possible resolution images. if we're gonna do all that work, it makes sense to meet best practices standards, and not just make a low-res working copy...

Thanks for the insight on the Gannett database.
I really appreciate this list. I honestly don't know where I'd be without a group of people to ask about these things!

Just in passing, my old library subscribes to Gannett/Novel NY. It only goes back to Dec 2002 for our local paper (and when I retired 4 years ago it only went back to 1999). So right then and there we are losing ground. Card files we put online go back to 1818; there are 500,000 of them. We used to (note past tense) cut and file the papers from 1936-2012; there are 5 million clips in those. From 2012 to present we have nothing but what is currently available from Gannett, and you know that is going to go away as soon as the library cannot afford it.

It is of great benefit to continue to add items to your catalog. As you are from NY state, you might consider participating in New York Historic Newspapers or Fultonhistory.com. Several local libraries have gotten their holding digitized and OCR'd by them, even in cooperation with local colleges. Tersely, I do not trust Gannett/Novel NY to always be there.

Hi, Maggie. You can contact Tom Tryniski from Fultonhistory.com to see where he recommends getting films. You MIGHT be able to get them on loan from the NYS library.

Thanks for the responses on digitizing local history from the newspaper.

I will continue to add articles to the catalog. I agree, however, that digitization is the way to go. I have been attempting to begin a project with NY Historic newspapers and/or the DPLA (they have a video on how they will help you digitize your newspapers, but when I called, they pointed my to NY Historic Newspapers, which accepts my already digitized images.) However, I do not have master reels of microfilm. If I digitize my used microfilm copies, the image quality will be compromised.

We have looked into vendors to digitize our reels, but they would be out-of-house for far too long (a few months) and the OCR is horrible. I didn't know that one could partner with Fulton history. That would be ideal. Any ideas on how to get master reels for a high-quality project, or tips on starting a digitization project in-house? I'd like to digitize, but would like highest possible resolution images. if we're gonna do all

All,

I've noticed a number of recent emails going to the GENEALIB list that are replies to digests, and the subject line is not being changed to reflect what the message is about.

Nobody wants to see email in their inbox where they have no idea what the message is about.

Going forward, if I see another occurrence of this, I'll automatically change the individual's subscription from digest to individual messages.

Traci,

It's been a little bit since I helped a patron with any of the databases until this week and I notice that the new Ancestry interface, especially with the new Wills collection is very like Fold3 which is now an Ancestry company and the "hiding" of the print button is the same as familysearch.org an Ancestry "partner."

I'm thinking that at some point all of the big guys will look and act the same which is a shame because they don't seem to be taking the "best" features of each when making their enhancements. And I realize "best" is a personal opinion but I surely do wish they would spend less time with the display (adding filmstrip view, which incidentally drops the ability to type in a page number to jump to, making sure you can get back to the search results page with the back button...) and more time adding content, indexing, etc.

These last "improvements" to Ancestry, appear to be what a programmer considers an improvement not what a researcher such as myself or my patrons think of or desire as improvements hence the petition <http://www.thepetitionsite.com/600/803/575/save-ancestrycom-classic/> effort o get Ancestry to return to the previous version.

The 12th Annual Genealogy Librarians' Seminar is planned for Friday, October 16th at the Ohio Genealogical Society, 611 SR 97 W, Bellville OH 44813 (half mile east of Exit 165 on I-71 just south of Mansfield). The theme this year is "Educating the Librarian to Better Help Others". The speakers/program -
Tom Neel, OGS, on Exploring Naturalization Records; Gwen Mayer, Hudson
Library & Historical Society, on Genealogical & Historical Programming Nuts
& Bolts; Lisa Long, Ohio History Connection, on Institutional Records, Ohio's State Hospitals and Developmental Centers; and Amy Dawson, Cleveland Public Library, on Its Electric, Publicizing Your Archival Collections (EAD FACTORY). Fee $15 (or $25 with lunch). Payment may be made at www.ogs.org via the events pop-up box - more details there too and forms to print out.
This is an educational gathering for professionals who work in the genealogical and local history field in Ohio's libraries. We get local history librarians, Ohio chapter volunteer librarians, and folks just interested in the topics - and we have FUN! It's good to meet the people that you talk to via social media in the field.

I have to agree with Katheryn. I use Ancestry as little as possible because using it makes me crazy.
To have FamilySearch do some of the same things is really driving me nuts.

I had to show a patron on Wednesday how to print on Ancestry. She had tried at home and couldn't get it to work. I'm grateful someone on this list had mentioned where the print button was so I was able to help her.

I too, hate the filmstrip view on FamilySearch. I hate having to click to a different view so I can go page by page. The filmstrip view should be the exception, not the default.

I agree with all that has been said. I just had to insist that our OT person put all the icons and task bars on our new public computers because our patrons will have no idea what to do without them.

The biggest problem is not having the county name in the search results. I have to open records to identify the county to see if it is the right record. Lots of time wasted and lots aggravation. Why would anyone think the county was not needed? Obviously no one who has ever done this type of research!

Don’t they have researchers try out improvements? before making them permanent?
And if users have not been complaining about something, why change it?

It is most exasperating to have patrons who are barely computer literate that I have personally taught to use Ancestry, only to have them all need help again now!

I am very sorry to hear that some of you are having problems with the current Ancestry Image Viewer.

Change is always time consuming and I know that when you have to spend time with multiple patrons, that just multiplies the frustration.

While I can't change the image viewer, I can point you to some help:

In Ancestry Academy (http://www.ancestryacademy.com) if you go to the course : Navigating Wills and Probates on Ancestry (https://www.ancestry.com/academy/course/navigating-wills-probates ) the lesson "Viewing the Images" covers all of the buttons and the filmstrip as well as how to move to the beginning of the roll. The entire course which is free to registered users would be useful to your patrons.
There are also many other free courses, including on Search that might be useful to patrons having problems.

Anne, it is very nice of you to reply, but you are addressing librarians and researchers, not the general public. We are used to change and welcome change that is an improvement. The change being discussed in this forum are not an improvement. Many of our patrons are barely computer literate and do not have home computers or regular access to WiFi for their mobile devices. They are not going to watch online courses and wouldn't understand them if they did.

We are not being "hateful"or closeminded here, just hoping that the database owners and administrators will work with us in the future.

I am very sorry to hear that some of you are having problems with the current Ancestry Image Viewer.

Change is always time consuming and I know that when you have to spend time with multiple patrons, that just multiplies the frustration.

While I can't change the image viewer, I can point you to some help:

In Ancestry Academy (http://www.ancestryacademy.com) if you go to the course: Navigating Wills and Probates on Ancestry (https://www.ancestry.com/academy/course/navigating-wills-probates) the lesson "Viewing the Images" covers all of the buttons and the filmstrip as well as how to move to the beginning of the roll. The entire course which is free to registered users would be useful to your patrons.

There are also many other free courses, including on Search that might be useful to patrons having problems.

Thank you Anne, for your reply. Many of us were scratching our heads trying to find the new print button (which looks nothing like any print button we have ever seen.)

Have you ever considered having a focus groups of expert users of AncestryLibraryEdition to run new ideas by? I'm sure many of the GENALIB followers would be glad to preview changes and make suggestions.

At the very least, you could announce changes on this forum so we know what changes are upcoming. It's very frustrating for us to have a patron ask a question and not know what they are talking about.

Thanks,

And I agree too. Thank you Marge for the excellent suggestions.

It would be ideal to be consulted before changes take place. As subscribers, we know our users and their capabilities. This most recent change with the print button is not logical or intuitive. I would be thrilled to participate in a focus group.

I also agree that if we can't be consulted beforehand, at the very least, subscribers to the library edition should receive advance notice. In our case, our 50 or so library volunteers could be informed and trained so they can help researchers. It's unfortunate when our 60-something volunteers are unable to figure out how to print and our researchers go home dissatisfied with the whole experience.

I have to repeat: The worst problem is the removal of county names from the record results. "District 1" does not tell me where the person is located. I just left the library after assisting someone with searches for my own home state where I know all 120 counties and most of the small communities. I still had to open multiple records for people with the same or similar names until I could find the one in the correct county.

I agree with everyone that we should be given a heads-up about any changes in Ancestry Library Edition.

In the case of changing how to print, we are working with many, many older adults who have gotten over their 'fear' of the computer but when they work on Ancestry they want to print it out. When you make it hard for them, they don't come back.

The print button being hidden under the 'tools' (and the tools icon is even hard to spot) kept us guessing for about 24 hours.

I have to sometimes wonder, do the 'powers that be' at Ancestry want you to print less and less?

Is this a way of encouraging folks to purchase a subscription so that they can just click and add to their personal trees (with little thought)?

And by the way, we help many people who have personal subscriptions who do just that (just take whatever Ancestry finds for them) and they do not understand what they have or what they are supposed to be looking for - census searching is a good example, they don't understand it's purpose or why they would even want that information for their family.

Thanks for listening!

Has anyone checked on subscribing to Newspapers.com for their library? The price we were quoted for our library population of under 30,000 was $5395 for a year of the world subscription. It was $1298 for just the Indiana papers. Way out of our price range and in fact it is almost as much as we pay for ALE, HQ and Fold3+ together. Wondering how many libraries could afford this high of price for this product.

Most of our patrons do not have personal subscriptions, and some of the volunteers don't either. However, if they are frustrated by the Library Edition, they won't even consider signing up for their own subscription. I can't always be in the genealogy room, as I also work reference. I will be able to tell the volunteers about changes, and I hope they'll remember to tell any patrons they assist.

It bothers me that all too many of the "major" genealogy providers are making changes without considering that many of the newer users are not really computer oriented and do not understand that digital records consist of only a small fraction of the total number of existing records.

Those new to genealogy expect to be able to click and go immediately to a certain record. Explanations of "why" and "why not" a record is available are not always welcomed and occasionally result in the patron believing we do not know how to find the records. Coupled with that attitude, a lack of desire to have to learn how to use a site that is far from intuitive, and the unexpectedly complex nature of indepth genealogy all too many new researchers quit. We need to work together to smooth research paths. A group working with companies is marvelous as long as our intention is to build each other up.

Is this a way of encouraging folks to purchase a subscription so that they can just click and add to their personal trees (with little thought)?

There are all great comments. My past experiences in the public library and 30 years of volunteering at a Family History Center, with all levels and ages of uses shows a commonality.
Users are as a rule not geeks. [I am!]

If it is not plain, they will not find it.

Subject: [Genealib] MyHeritage Library Edition
Message-ID: <CANLxXLFFkxMbUO05btSu1_Dmy6u-TRqcEZBthWY4xhsWr3OniA@mail.gmail.com>

Nebraska libraries have recently started subscribing to MyHeritage Library Edition, and I’m teaching a class on it next Sunday.

I know I'm going to be asked how the library edition differs from the personal subscription, but can't find a clear statement of this anywhere.
Obviously library patrons won't be able to add their own family tree information, or, apparently, contact contributors of info to the MyHeritage and Geni family trees, but I'm wondering about the record sets. I think the personal subscription gives access to a more robust newspaper collection, for example?

I'm also having some trouble seeing exactly what is in there, in some cases. For example: city directories. Their collection seems to be the DistantCousin collection (which is free anyway), but there is no way to see which cities are included—you just have to search blind. Or you could just go over to the DistantCousin site, where you can easily search by place and immediately determine that the only Des Moines directory is the 1897 one....In fact, I'm finding many of the resources are actually available free elsewhere.

Anyway, if anyone can point me to a resource that lists the main differences between the library edition and the personal subscription, I would be very grateful! I would also be thrilled to find a list of the collections at MyHeritage that are truly unique, or at least not available free elsewhere. One of the big advantages of MyHeritage versus Ancestry is that it allows home access, and it does have all the US and British national censuses.

Thanks for any input!

Colleagues,

The Genealogy Center of the Allen County Public Library has an opening for a full-time librarian. If you like public programming, helping individuals discover their family stories, using an amazing collection, and working with a motivated, customer-centric staff, we'd love to hear from you.

A link to the position announcement is below.

I too am frustrated with database changes that are not intuitive and changed without warning or explanation. An email ahead of time to libraries subscribing to Ancestry Library Edition and personal subscribers to Ancestry.com would be appreciated. In addition, a simple to understand pop-up about major changes might help as well. These steps would also show respect for the researchers and the staff trying to help them.

Marge Bardeen was spot on with her suggestions. A panel of varying computer and genealogical research skill levels to test and give feedback to database owners before decisions are made should result in the best, user-friendly product possible. I would love to volunteer for such a panel.

The Israel Genealogy Research Association is focused on genealogy—helping people with their family research, and making available to the public a wide variety of material from the Ottoman period through the early years of Israeli Statehood, as well as additional documents about Jews from the Diaspora which are located in Israel. We will attempt to work with people from many nationalities, and to provide information in as many languages as possible.

We strive to:
- Prepare databases from materials available in Israel that include the Ottoman period through the early years of the State of Israel, and records located in various archives relating to the places our relatives lived before coming to Israel to be accessible on our website.
- Develop a website with a sophisticated search engine, including images, allowing people to easily search the databases for specific names, see the information and original documents in addition to research articles, aides and other relevant material.
- Develop webinars and courses at a variety of levels to aid people in their research—from school age children beginning their search to adults, to be incorporated in our website.
- Help people outside of Israel to locate relatives in Israel, especially those families separated from each other during the Holocaust.
- Develop different mini-course components to be presented in a variety of educational settings.
- Provide opportunities for genealogical discovery and learning through mentoring, hands-on visits to archives, regional meetings and seminars.
- Foster cooperation with other organizations and archives with a connection to genealogy.

Registration is required to do a search and is free.

We do our outmost to make every database available for searching in Latin letters and Hebrew. We transliteration the names of the documents, but not any other of the information in our documents. While most of the original documents are in Hebrew, we also have documents in our collection in English, French, German and other languages.

The process looks good so far. The next step should probably be a mtg with John and the board Prez going to the mayor. If nothing, then the lawyer should then send a letter complaining about her breaking the original merger agreement, which included them doing janitorial.

The library could sue, but the town has nothing. The library could take over the janitorial, but that's what she wants.

Hello,
I am the person who compiles the birth/marriage/death indexes for our local newspaper. Today, I just turned to the previous Sunday’s newspaper and found my first male couple. I have two columns: one for husband and the other for wife. What to do? I was thinking something generic, such as Spouse 1 and Spouse 2, but it sounds like Dr. Seuss.

Can anyone think of something tactful, more appropriate? I am low on brain power at the moment.

Personally, most of the people I know go with spouse. Some refer to both of themselves as husband to each other, or as wife to each other. It may be different in a larger urban area.

I forwarded this to one of the brides (yes, two) from a wedding I recently helped celebrate. She replied "We are listed on our certificate and Spouse 1 and Spouse 2. And Dr. Seuss is awesome."

We use Spouse 1 and Spouse 2 in our marriage indexes, since each marriage is entered twice under each party's name.
I recently attended a presentation from one of the county clerk's office employees. She said that the marriage certificates are now being issued with lines for Spouse 1 and Spouse 2, so I guess that seems to be the common method.

Hi Everyone,

I would just like to make you aware of an upcoming workshop on Saturday October 17 by the Zion Genealogical Society in partnership with the Zion Benton Public Library.

We have speakers Gail Lukasik who appeared on "Genealogy Roadshow" and Bruce Allardice who does Civil War and military genealogy plus other speakers from the society.

You will see an attached PDF 2-page "brochure" for the program as part of this email that you can print off and display within your library if possible.
The program is free to all but there is a cost for lunch if you want it. Registration is required. My contact phone number is shown on the brochure.

Thanks for spreading the word. I appreciate it.

Sincerely,

I have almost a complete run of the "New Orleans Genesis" publication from years 1973-1995. There are a few missing issues but for the most part they are all there. They were never accessioned at our library and so until I began an inventory didn't realize we even had them (we have few people doing research in our small library about New Orleans). If anyone would like them, please let me know and I will be glad to ship them to you for the cost of postage. There are 82 issues all together.

Kathleen,

I would like them, but I do not currently work at a library. I do teach genealogy at the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at Illinois, I do genealogical volunteering at the local Family History Center, and also sometimes teach courses at the Champaign County Historical Archives. Also, would use the information to post on New Orleans related Facebook genealogical and local history groups. If you want to bypass me for an institution, though, I understand.

If so, I would like to know what your experiences have been with it, and whether you have had any problems. I would also like to know whether it has been your only online catalog, or whether your institution has also continued to use any other library cataloging software at the same time.

Hi, All:

A patron just brought to my attention two blank pages from Barbara L. Benge's 1880 Cherokee National Census, Indian Territory (Oklahoma) (2000), pages 586 and 587. We have had this book for years and nobody ever noticed until now. I don't know if these pages are missing in all copies or not, so if you have a copy that does have these pages, would you be able to scan and send them?

Thanks!

Hello:

Since many of us serve as local history librarians, as well as Genealogy Librarians, (and archivists and so on?), I thought this would be a good group to send this question: have any of you done history programs that utilize a 3D printer in some way?

Our library is looking for outside the box ideas on how to use one. I've seen some libraries that did programs where they recreated artifacts and then did sandbox archaeology digs, but I'm not sure that would work here. We are thinking either we would create objects in advance or that would be part of the maker experience for participants. Of course, the filament is expensive, so we can't go to wild. We are open to children or adult programs.

Some thoughts I've had so far are listed below. If you've already tried one of these, please share on your success.
- recreation of historical objects like jewelry made by participants while we have an expert talk on that specific subject or possibly archaic medical or other tools.
- some type of physical representation of a person's DNA that would be meaningful to them. ??
- recreating historic game pieces and teaching games. (We also have a game day at our library.)
- creation of 3D maps including representations of historic towns.

I'm eager to hear your ideas.

Jennifer
