Subject: [Genealib] speaker on a specfic subject Message-ID: <CAKEoNhUQFm7E=x4RgUZWmJG6CekwHr+pp_v1GCKE81rrmSj=mA@mail.gmail.com>

My local library research council has had requests for a speaker on "rubber sheeting" maps, which is basically an overlaying GIS process using (sometimes) Google Earth. I attended a seminar back in 2010 given by Dr.
Robert Jones of Skidmore College. I was wondering if anyone has any suggestions for other persons closer to Rochester NY whom we could ask for such a presentation.

Today we had a patron donate a 1956 yearbook for Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Since we are in Georgia this is out of our genealogy collection scope. If anyone wants it let me know. It's free for postage.

We are cataloging our genealogical periodicals and I'd like your input. Below is a list of the ones I'm in question about retaining because of their age. Many of these are very old. Which would you retain and which would you discard? Do you use dates of issues to decide whether to retain or discard? If use by patrons was the only criteria, they would all be discarded.

Discard ones that are mostly "how to"--newer is better for that. Keep periodicals that have actual genealogical info in them. Of the ones you list, I might keep Genealogical Helper, since that includes a lot of researcher queries--out of date, but I've found some clues in the past that way, even if the original poster was no longer reachable. I am not familiar with Genealogy Bulletin, but I'd probably dump the others, especially if space is an issue (and when is it not?).

I usually also check (in general) to see if anything I am thinking of discarding might be available digitally, or at another local repository.

If you have time to fool with it, offer your discards on the list for postage or postage/handling in case someone wants to fill in gaps in a collection. A larger library may want to have the periodicals indexed in PERSI.

Some of those might already be available digitally - I know that Genealogical Helper is. Thing is, you never know what might be useful.
Think about the Boston Transcript, which was decades out of date but was heavily used when I was working. Check WorldCat to see who has them cataloged and where they might be available.

like to talk to someone who might have preserved old wallpaper or know what I can do. I'm really excited about having this wallpaper plus the letters and photos the

Hello,
I wanted to find out what other libraries do with foreign historical/genealogical material mainly books. I have several books that have been donated and they are written in Dutch.

Would any of you like them for postage?

Do they fit into your written collection development policy? Do you have a community that will use this material? If not then what library should you offer this material?

Hi James,
Here are the questions you asked with the answers.
Do they fit into your written collection development policy? No ?
Do you have a community that will use this material? No

We are looking for a library that would be interested. Any suggestions?

My cousin had a newspaper printed on wallpaper near the end of the Civil War. She took it to a frame shop and had double sided glass put on it. Of course this was for a private home rather than a library. :)

WHAT'S NEW IN RELIC
October 2016

The Ruth E. Lloyd Information Center for Genealogy and Local History (RELIC), Prince William Public Library System, Bull Run Regional Library, 8051 Ashton Avenue, Manassas, VA 20109. 703-792-4540 Email: relic2 at pwcgov.org<mailto:relic2 at pwcgov.org>.

To read the latest lists of new materials available in RELIC click on What's New in RELIC. <http://www.pwcgov.org/government/dept/library/Pages/RELIC-news.aspx>

You may notice some changes in RELIC if you haven't visited for a while. As we work to make your time in RELIC more enjoyable and productive, we evaluate materials in the collection and remove or replace those that have outlived their usefulness.   We have recently rearranged some portions of the collection - Now most of our materials dealing with the Civil War in Virginia are shelved outside the RELIC room, near the microfilm cabinets. Biographies have been returned to the end of the 900s. This has allowed a little extra room on shelves in RELIC, and some space near the entrance for more displays.

Some Prince William materials which see infrequent use (such as most manuscripts) are stored in a county storage facility. If you want something in our catalog that shows availability as "offsite storage," you need to contact us ahead of your visit so that it can be retrieved for you.   We want your experience to be as pleasant as possible. Please let us know what we can do to make that so.

Please note that RELIC and Bull Run Regional Library will be closed from December 4 to 17 for the installation of new carpeting.

Many of the assumptions about our state - and some of what we were taught in school - are outdated. Charlie Grymes has studied Virginia history for over 40 years; he currently teaches The Geography of Virginia at George Mason University. Join him as he examines some of the historical myths which have shaped our perspectives, opinions and policies.

Today I came cross the website http://www.e-yearbook.com/. This is a pay site that offers people the ability to view yearbooks from across the country, and in some cases have the ability to purchase a reprint of the yearbook. This is my first time encountering this site. I was wondering if anyone else has viewed and/or purchased items from them? To be honest I do not intend to purchase anything for I am leery in how this site does not impede upon copyright. Also as an aside I decided to double check Ancestry's High School Yearbook collection, and found out something interesting. Again this was just a small, checked two local high schools, sample to see if what Ancestry had corresponded with E-yearbook. Not to my surprise, with the exception of few years, there was a near perfect coloration.

Most of these seem to be novels and dictionaries (feeble grasp of Dutch, so I'm not sure about a couple of them).

Hi,

I'm a volunteer with the Genealogical Forum of Oregon and we have a number of items that we are offering free for postage. I've attached a PDF with a detailed list. This list (#1) is mostly genealogical society publications, a lot of them from New York and New England with various other odds and ends.

Please respond to me directly and we can work out the details of delivery and payment.

Thanks,

I'm not familiar with them at all. I know classmates.com sells them too, for quite a hefty price, I've heard. My college put their yearbooks on archive.org so it's possible others have done the same.

Today I came cross the website http://www.e-yearbook.com/. This is a pay site that offers people the ability to view yearbooks from across the country, and in some cases have the ability to purchase a reprint of the yearbook. This is my first time encountering this site. I was wondering if anyone else has viewed and/or purchased items from them? To be honest I do not intend to purchase anything for I am leery in how this site does not impede upon copyright. Also as an aside I decided to double check Ancestry's High School Yearbook collection, and found out something interesting. Again this was just a small, checked two local high schools, sample to see if what Ancestry had corresponded with E-yearbook. Not to my surprise, with the exception of few years, there was a near perfect coloration.

check to try to find any photos that might exist of a person?

Mary,

My suggestions are to look for photographs being sold on ebay. They might try narrowing the search by the time period that they believe the person would've been photographed in and type of photography that existed in that time period. Also, a number of photos are on the social media site, Pinterest. To browse photos or anything on Pinterest they will need to create an account first and then they can look at what's posted there.

If you have access to Ancestry.com, there are many family photos that have been submitted by users, and some yearbook photos are also included.

Some county histories have photos, usually of businessmen.   How about as part of a group in the history of the church he attended?on the board or in the choir.
Photos of the place he worked, in a company history? Lodge group such as Masons, Moose, Elks?

I've actually had fairly good results with Google's image search, although sometimes some tinkering with search terms is needed.

My other standard practice is to contact the historical society (if there is one) for the town the person lived in. My experience has been that small, local historical societies are slower to respond but more likely to have such photographs than larger county/state historical societies.

It's also worth checking with the historical societies where children and grandchildren lived, as it seems to be common for heirs to donate locally.
For example, I found a picture of my couple greats grandmother ~ who never left the state of Massachusetts, and barely even ever left the county she lived in ~ in the collection of the Niagara Falls, Ontario, library, as one of her grandchildren died there, and his children donated a box of old stuff to the library.

Check with libraries, museums and archives for the person?s home town, county, state, or that of a close relative. Someone in family may have donated photos of their own family and of extended family, neighbors, etc. School yearbooks for both students and teachers. School class photos and those great old ones where the teacher and all the kids in the one-room school pose outside. If the person belonged to an organization there may be group photos or portraits of officers.
Church directories and histories (if you don?t know the individual church name but know the denomination, try archives and historical societies for that denomination? if they don?t have something themselves, they may be able to direct you to a likely church).

Other places for reproduced photos that will vary in quality: newspapers (think weddings, anniversaries, graduations, obituaries, birthdays), local histories, local and regional biographical volumes (most of businessmen and lawyers), family

Mary,

My suggestions are to look for photographs being sold on ebay. They might try narrowing the search by the time period that they believe the person would've been photographed in and type of photography that existed in that time period. Also, a number of photos are on the social media site, Pinterest. To browse photos or anything on Pinterest they will need to create an account first and then they can look at what's posted there.

I've never used it, but there is a free online resource called Dead Fred [

Worth a shot!

What about the digital public library or America site? I know in my area some historical sites have digitized some photo collections? Any possibilities there? Best of luck!

I can tell you for a fact that there are M-A-N-Y pictures of peiple in various libraries and archives which have not been scanned and are not online. For example, the Geneva NY Historical Society has a collection of thousands of Genevans.

I have been working on that for 5 years now, and have gotten 5500 of them scanned and uploaded, and I am perhaps 50 to 60 per cent finished.
Eventually those will be name searchable and findable on the web. But not until now.

Most libraries have very large picture files (my old one has probably 125,000 items pictorially) but only a smattering of them have been scanned and are searchable online.

So, as the others have suggested use whatever sources that you can think of online, but also contact those "on the ground" where you are interested tp see what help they can be. And do not forget digitized newspapers. There are plenty of pictures of people in them as well.

Dear colleagues,

My library has a collection of notebooks and ledgers that are the membership records and business meeting minutes of a local church which disbanded years ago.
The binders and ledger books were quite ordinary for their time period (1920s-1980)-faux leather, canvas or denim over cardboard. Most of these items have been digitized as part of the Portal to Texas History, but we want to keep the originals, obviously.

We have archival boxes for storage which will be labeled, but we're looking for solutions to labeling the items themselves in case they're separated from their boxes. Does anyone have any recommendations as to how to affix spine labels to the items without damaging the surfaces?

Thanks for your advice and assistance,

NO! Do not put anything on them. Treat them as archival materials and use a acid free book mark to note all your cataloging data. If you must, use pencil to mark ownership somewhere out of site - like lower end of inside back cover. Put your location data on the outside of your archival boxes.
Treat them as archival material and only let one box to be viewed at a time. That will prevent separation of the archival box from your original ledger.

Hi Lynette,
We use our archival folders and cut them into strips to make a marker. We put a barcode on the strip and the call number and place it in the book. I?ve worked in a Special Collection Library and that was pretty much the same thing that they did. I have seen other repositories also take the extra step of writing the call # in pencil on the inside cover. This applies to our rare book items that are in a special case. We don?t separately label archival collection items-just the folders or boxes that they are in and then described on the finding aid.

Best practice is to never affix anything to original materials, such as a ledger. Record the unique identifier, with pencil, within the volume and, if you are really worried, the box number. Serve them one at a time, with their box nearby, and they shouldn't get separated. And, even if there is some momentary confusion, will not be the same as permanently damaging the poor thing. :) And, label the box well, so no confusion coming from that side.

Hi Elaine,

I'm a retired librarian, family history researcher, and member of FxGS. I now live in South Carolina. I'm wondering if I qualify for any of your discards if I pay for postage. If no library wants the volume after 3 month or so on the list, maybe I would qualify? I'm also a member of the Board of Trustees of Lancaster County Library System. We have a small family history collection, but no staff member can devote their time to reference assistance at this point. Maybe I'll volunteer sometime. But I wonder if we would qualify to receive books in trade.

Lynette,

We use Gaylord's Rare Book ID strips. They are acid-free and the size of a long bookmark and have room for both a spine label and barcode. I believe they come in packages of 100.

solutions to labeling the items themselves in case they're separated from their boxes. Does anyone have any recommendations as to how to affix spine labels to the items without damaging the surfaces?

Thanks for your advice and assistance,

All,
     Have any of you been having odd problems with Ancestry Library Edition? I was just browsing the Meridian, Mississippi city directory for 1888 and on page 81 received an error message. I retried the search several times but the only City Directories shown for Meridian were in the 1950's. They had marvelous information about geography and businesses that is well worth browsing for background, as well as searching. I want to finish!

I just tried to browse the Meridian city directories. Oddly, I see more than just the 1950s, but the earliest one for me is 1899. There are about 25 directories, from 1899 through 1959, with three or four in each decade.
No answers, just more questions.

I've actually had fairly good results with Google's image search, although sometimes some tinkering with search terms is needed.

My other standard practice is to contact the historical society (if there is one) for the town the person lived in. My experience has been that small, local historical societies are slower to respond but more likely to have such photographs than larger county/state historical societies.

It's also worth checking with the historical societies where children and grandchildren lived, as it seems to be common for heirs to donate locally. For example, I found a picture of my couple greats grandmother ~ who never left the state of Massachusetts, and barely even ever left the county she lived in ~ in the collection of the Niagara Falls, Ontario, library, as one of her grandchildren died there, and his children donated a box of old stuff to the library.

Other places for reproduced photos that will vary in quality: newspapers (think weddings, anniversaries, graduations, obituaries, birthdays), local histories, local and regional biographical volumes (most of businessmen and lawyers), family history books (published or self-published, or printouts donated to a library or society).

Mary,

My suggestions are to look for photographs being sold on ebay. They might try narrowing the search by the time period that they believe the person would've been photographed in and type of photography that existed in that time period. Also, a number of photos are on the social media site, Pinterest. To browse photos or anything on Pinterest they will need to create an account first and then they can look at what's posted there.

I have experienced a similar problem with South Carolina records showing up with an error page, but after refreshing or returning later in the day the record appears.
Refreshing is by no means a quick fix, but it does help at times. Also I have noticed that on more than one occasion when we use Chrome that Ancestry will lock up. In other words, you are unable to enter information into the search boxes as well as the auto-fill feature is disengaged. When this happens we switch over to Explorer, and it works fine. However, there are occasions when it lock ups in both browsers.

I am curious. Would the person have been in the local newspaper? A few months ago a patron was searching for a picture of her Grandfather. He had lost a bet, and to walk from one city to another, which is about 20 miles one way. She mentioned that it had appeared in one of our local newspapers. With a month and year I was able to find the photo in question.

Also depending on when the person lived you could try Chronicling America to see if he/she may have appeared in a newspaper. Another place to search in would be yearbooks or company photos.

I haven't tried it today, but yesterday, when it tried to prepare an image for printing, it froze every time. I finally gave up on it. Will try again tomorrow.

I have experienced a similar problem with South Carolina records showing up with an error page, but after refreshing or returning later in the day the record appears.
Refreshing is by no means a quick fix, but it does help at times. Also I have noticed that on more than one occasion when we use Chrome that Ancestry will lock up. In other words, you are unable to enter information into the search boxes as well as the auto-fill feature is disengaged. When this happens we switch over to Explorer, and it works fine. However, there are occasions when it lock ups in both browsers.

I've only had problems like this when I'm not using Internet Explorer. I've noticed Ancestry does not seem to "get along" with the new Edge that came with Windows 10. I did not have any problems using Ancestry today or in the last few days, but I only use Internet Explorer with it.

I have experienced a similar problem with South Carolina records showing up with an error page, but after refreshing or returning later in the day the record appears.
Refreshing is by no means a quick fix, but it does help at times. Also I have noticed that on more than one occasion when we use Chrome that Ancestry will lock up. In other words, you are unable to enter information into the search boxes as well as the auto-fill feature is disengaged. When this happens we switch over to Explorer, and it works fine. However, there are occasions when it lock ups in both browsers.

Elaine,
     The entry indicates the first directory is for 1899 but when I started looking at the film it had 1889 first. The 1889 directory has a wealth of information and our area early directories are not only post 1935 but also pale in comparison.

I just tried to browse the Meridian city directories. Oddly, I see more than just the 1950s, but the earliest one for me is 1899. There are about 25 directories, from 1899 through 1959, with three or four in each decade. No answers, just more questions.

All,
    Have any of you been having odd problems with Ancestry Library Edition? I was just browsing the Meridian, Mississippi city directory for 1888 and on page 81 received an error message. I retried the search several times but the only City Directories shown for Meridian were in the 1950?s. They had marvelous information about geography and businesses that is well worth browsing for background, as well as searching. I want to finish!

Clearing more personal shelf space - two books to a good library home:

(1) Anne Bruner Eales, Army Wives on the American Frontier: Living by the Bugles. 1996 paperback, like new. This is a lively and well written book.

From the back cover ? Moving from the restrictive chrysalis of "civilized" tradition and Victorian viewpoints in the East, the women who followed their Army husbands to forts in the West made an excursion into a freedom of throught and action that most of them had never experienced or even imagined. "No one interested in the history of the American West or women?s history should miss this well-written, carefully researched, comprehensive treatment of a subject that previous scholars have largely ignored." ?Herman Viola, author of "Exploring the West"

(2) Martin F. Schmitt with Dee Brown, The Settlers? West, 1974 paperback, pretty much like new other than age.

Hello,

We need some examples of contracts that have been set up between a library and a donor. The donor is willing to loan the items to your library either temporary or long term with some stipulations.

One example is some oral histories are on loan for us to house them (we have a temperature/humidity controlled room) but the still belong to the donor. We will eventually (need to do some transcribing) put them online at our digital collection. We are trying to share costs of the digitizing, transcribing and hosting online. But we need a contract to cover anything that could occur.

Another example, we have some scrapbooks from local societies that we house in our archive room. The societies own them but they are in our collection as permanent loan. They have given us permission to put some of their early scrapbooks online.

I know there has to be some kind of contract for permanent loans to a library or museum that could help us write our own contracts. If you have any examples, please send it to me cheryls at plano.gov<mailto:cheryls at plano.gov>.

Thank you!

Do you have access to Archive Finder or is there another site besides http://www.loc.gov/coll/nucmc/ that has the index to NUCMC?

If so, what is the cost?

We would like to remove the multi volume set and indexes which takes up two full shelves. I bought this back in 1989 and I still love it, but hoping there is a full index online. We need space.

Thanks.

I sure would like to believe you. I tried a test on those websites and have not been able to locate the following record from my 1966 NUCMC.

Chappelear Family MS 66-274

Papers 1876-1959

In College of William and Mary, Earl Gregg Swem Library

The LOC website is too difficult for our patrons (and me too!)

What am I doing wrong?

But does anyone know if the NUCMC that is on WorldCat includes all of the earlier material or just the contents from when they started doing electronic records? Not too long ago, NUCMC's description stated that it did NOT include the earlier printed contents.

I think that's what Pam is asking, and I'd like to know too!

Per NUCMC's own FAQ at http://www.loc.gov/coll/nucmc/searchingfaqs.html#faq2

	* Are all NUCMC records accessible in one single online catalog?

NO. The NUCMC cooperative cataloging project began in 1959. From 1959 to 1993, the NUCMC catalog was produced as printed volumes [8]. In 1986, NUCMC staff began using the RLG Union Catalog (now defunct) to produce its published catalog -- from 1986 - 1993, NUCMC records are available both online through OCLC WorldCat and in the printed volumes. Beginning in 1993, records created by NUCMC catalogers are only available in OCLC WorldCat.
	* Are all NUCMC records available in OCLC WorldCat?

NO. Only records created since 1986 are included in OCLC WorldCat. All

Sigh
Ok, so where do we write a grant to make that retrospective cataloging happen?
I wonder how much of this material has been recataloged since 1959, as the local catalogs moved onto computerized systems. (Obviously not that one from the Chappelear Family.)

Thanks for pointing this out, another resource for me to consult (I started working in the field post-1998!)

Per NUCMC's own FAQ at http://www.loc.gov/coll/nucmc/searchingfaqs.html#faq2

   1. Are all NUCMC records accessible in one single online catalog?

No. The NUCMC cooperative cataloging project began in 1959. From 1959 to 1993, the NUCMC catalog was produced as printed volumes<http://www.loc.gov/coll/nucmc/nucmcvols.html>. In 1986, NUCMC staff began using the RLG Union Catalog (now defunct) to produce its published catalog -- from 1986 - 1993, NUCMC records are available both online through OCLC WorldCat and in the printed volumes. Beginning in 1993, records created by NUCMC catalogers are only available in OCLC WorldCat.

   1. Are all NUCMC records available in OCLC WorldCat?

No. Only records created since 1986 are included in OCLC WorldCat. All records created from 1959-1985 are only available in printed volumes<http://www.loc.gov/coll/nucmc/nucmcvols.html>.

If so, what is the cost?

We would like to remove the multi volume set and indexes which takes up two full shelves. I bought this back in 1989 and I still love it, but hoping there is a full index online. We need space.

Thanks.

Subject: Re: [Genealib] NUCMC

Per NUCMC's own FAQ at http://www.loc.gov/coll/nucmc/searchingfaqs.html#faq2

   1. Are all NUCMC records accessible in one single online catalog?

No. The NUCMC cooperative cataloging project began in 1959. From 1959 to 1993, the NUCMC catalog was produced as printed volumes<https://urldefense.proofpoint.com/v2/url?u=http-

60xqzaAYJlam4dTnPFw&e=>. In 1986, NUCMC staff began using the RLG Union Catalog (now defunct) to produce its published catalog -- from 1986 - 1993, NUCMC records are available both online through OCLC WorldCat and in the printed volumes.
Beginning in 1993, records created by NUCMC catalogers are only available in OCLC WorldCat.

   1. Are all NUCMC records available in OCLC WorldCat?

No. Only records created since 1986 are included in OCLC WorldCat. All records created from 1959-1985 are only available in printed volumes<https://urldefense.proofpoint.com/v2/url?u=http-

I just looked it up but nothing came up using the surname. I searched "Papers 1876-1959" and got this result.

If you have further questions about it, the helpful staff at Manuscripts & Rare Books at Swem will surely be able to help you. I'm glad you asked the question because this surname is one I need to work on for my older son-in-laws family in Georgia that may have earlier been in Virginia. I didn't know Swem had this title (never looked for it anyway).

Pam,

You might want to consider checking out ArchiveGrid ( https://beta.worldcat.org/archivegrid/), as it is a lot more user friendly than NUCMC on WorldCat. It still won't include the information from the printed volumes (for records catalogued between 1959 and 1985), but it includes the rest of NUCMC, as well as searchable access to online finding aids from over 1,000 participating repositories. A surname search for your "chappelear," for example, brings up a finding aid for the collection at William and Mary as the first result.

There are a few differences between NUCMC on WorldCat and NUCMC in ArchiveGrid, though not enough to impact most searches. ArchiveGrid employs a variety of filters that aid in determining what records it will pull in, and these filters eliminate the inclusion of certain records, such as published records (e.g. dissertations) that may have found their way into NUCMC. ArchiveGrid also pulls in certain other non-NUCMC MARC records from WorldCat that have been identified as having possible interest to ArchiveGrid users.

I believe a subscription to Archive Finder is still the only way to get electronic access to the NUCMC records catalogued between 1959 and 1985.

Per NUCMC's own FAQ at http://www.loc.gov/coll/nucmc/searchingfaqs.html#faq2

1.   Are all NUCMC records accessible in one single online catalog?

are available both online through OCLC WorldCat and in the printed volumes.
Beginning in 1993, records created by NUCMC catalogers are only available in OCLC WorldCat.

I just looked it up but nothing came up using the surname. I searched "Papers 1876-1959" and got this result.

If you have further questions about it, the helpful staff at Manuscripts & Rare Books at Swem will surely be able to help you. I'm glad you asked the question because this surname is one I need to work on for my older son-in-laws family in Georgia that may have earlier been in Virginia. I didn't know Swem had this title (never looked for it anyway).

Pam,

You might want to consider checking out ArchiveGrid (https://beta.worldcat.org/archivegrid/), as it is a lot more user friendly than NUCMC on WorldCat. It still won't include the information from the printed volumes (for records catalogued between 1959 and 1985), but it includes the rest of NUCMC, as well as searchable access to online finding aids from over 1,000 participating repositories. A surname search for your "chappelear," for example, brings up a finding aid for the collection at William and Mary as the first result.

There are a few differences between NUCMC on WorldCat and NUCMC in ArchiveGrid, though not enough to impact most searches. ArchiveGrid employs a variety of filters that aid in determining what records it will pull in, and these filters eliminate the inclusion of certain records, such as published records (e.g. dissertations) that may have found their way into NUCMC. ArchiveGrid also pulls in certain other non-NUCMC MARC records from WorldCat that have been identified as having possible interest to ArchiveGrid users.

I believe a subscription to Archive Finder is still the only way to get electronic access to the NUCMC records catalogued between 1959 and 1985.

I think that depends on whether the records on ArchiveGrid come from MARC records on WorldCat, (90% of what?s on ArchiveGrid, as I understand), or whether they are direct links to PDF finding aids from individual institutions.

For example, the Special Collections Division at the Akron-Summit County Public Library participates in ArchiveGrid and our archival holdings there will link to our PDF finding aids on our website. It?s completely free to participate like this ? no membership to WorldCat required. You won?t find our collections on WorldCat or NUCMC. From our perspective, ArchiveGrid is an excellent way to get more exposure to our collections.

Pam,

I'm not suggesting ArchiveGrid in place of the books. They cover different records. The books cover records catalogued prior to 1985, but you will need to use the online version of NUCMC or ArchiveGrid to locate records catalogued* since* 1985 (or as late as 1993, depending on when you stopped purchasing the printed volumes). ArchiveGrid also includes some of the records included in NUCMC prior to 1985, but only if the participating institution has a finding aid online for that collection and is participating with ArchiveGrid. Some of these online finding aids that ArchiveGrid leads to are actually much more informative than what you can find in NUCMC.

The books are great, and necessary for those earlier catalogued records. I was just suggesting ArchiveGrid as a more user-friendly alternative to the LOC's website version of NUCMC (for the more recently catalogued records) which you said was too difficult for your patrons.

I completely agree with Jane and Kimberly. I love using Archive Grid and finding all the new resources, especially when you have finding aids.

As for NUCMC, I would not rely on Archive Grid and that is the decision I needed to make about keeping the older books. For now, they will stay.

Thank you everyone.

I think that depends on whether the records on ArchiveGrid come from MARC records on WorldCat, (90% of what?s on ArchiveGrid, as I understand), or whether they are direct links to PDF finding aids from individual institutions.

For example, the Special Collections Division at the Akron-Summit County Public Library participates in ArchiveGrid and our archival holdings there will link to our PDF finding aids on our website. It?s completely free to participate like this ? no membership to WorldCat required. You won?t find our collections on WorldCat or NUCMC. From our perspective, ArchiveGrid is an excellent way to get more exposure to our collections.

I can get access to Archive Grid, but sorry, it is not very good.

To be honest, in comparing the records in the books, they are much better than the ones online. Also, the book indexes are very good.

Pam,

You might want to consider checking out ArchiveGrid (https://beta.worldcat.org/archivegrid/), as it is a lot more user friendly than NUCMC on WorldCat. It still won't include the information from the printed volumes (for records catalogued between 1959 and 1985), but it includes the rest of NUCMC, as well as searchable access to online finding aids from over 1,000 participating repositories. A surname search for your "chappelear," for example, brings up a finding aid for the collection at William and Mary as the first result.

There are a few differences between NUCMC on WorldCat and NUCMC in ArchiveGrid, though not enough to impact most searches. ArchiveGrid employs a variety of filters that aid in determining what records it will pull in, and these filters eliminate the inclusion of certain records, such as published records (e.g. dissertations) that may have found their way into NUCMC. ArchiveGrid also pulls in certain other non-NUCMC MARC records from WorldCat that have been identified as having possible interest to ArchiveGrid users.

I believe a subscription to Archive Finder is still the only way to get electronic access to the NUCMC records catalogued between 1959 and 1985.

Just a note of addition: Often the descriptions of collections in NUCMC no longer match those in the online catalogs of owning institutions. Clearly, cataloging and processing changes have resulted in altered institutional records that were not, of course, transferred to NUCMC. It makes for interesting description comparisons, and sometimes you get more details from both that are missing in the two different ones.

Right now, someone at NUCMC is trying to figure out for us what the code JSC means for the library owning certain documents we are interested in for inclusion of their citations in our forthcoming book Connecticut in the American Revolution, eighth in our series. I was surprised when he called to say that he couldn?t figure it out either, but he?s checking some additional places!

Pam,

I'm not suggesting ArchiveGrid in place of the books. They cover different records.
The books cover records catalogued prior to 1985, but you will need to use the online version of NUCMC or ArchiveGrid to locate records catalogued since 1985 (or as late as 1993, depending on when you stopped purchasing the printed volumes).
ArchiveGrid also includes some of the records included in NUCMC prior to 1985, but only if the participating institution has a finding aid online for that collection and is participating with ArchiveGrid. Some of these online finding aids that ArchiveGrid leads to are actually much more informative than what you can find in NUCMC.

The books are great, and necessary for those earlier catalogued records. I was just suggesting ArchiveGrid as a more user-friendly alternative to the LOC's website version of NUCMC (for the more recently catalogued records) which you said was too difficult for your patrons.

I recommend looking at the the release form used by the Monterey Public Library in Monterey, CA. They have a "Toolkit for planning a community heritage story and photo collection" http://www.monterey.org/library/History-Room/ToolKit. Along with this they have a "Personal Story/Image Release" Form at this link %20Release%20Form.pdf. It may not be exactly what you are looking for, but it is the best I have found so far.

Everyone,

The answer to the ?JSC? question in NUCMC came from Peter Goodman there late yesterday. It is a code for an extinct private library in San Diego:

?Copley Press, J S Copley Library. I think it is the private archive of the following:
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Copley_Press<https://urldefense.proofpoint.com/v2/url?u=https-3A__en.wikipedia.org_wiki_Copley-5FPress&d=DQMFAg&c=euGZstcaTDllvimEN8b7jXrwqOf-v5A_CdpgnVfiiMM&r=BK7pQDGxYdz3wDfPeclV9jjzRlA7bnW0AOZTSAt6uUc&m=eruVaSELdE10h6gUIk7 q2_aKYa6AVZz5qSW7hZJkgiM&s=8aB2qkiF48mjVshCl7hokpuUO9RbEvFtxLzvPx9vFHE&e=> However, I don?t know if the archive still exists? I don?t find much on Google? The record was cataloged in 1986? it is NOT a NUCMC record??

Had I known that the place was in California, that might have set off a bell because we have encountered references to this dead library in the past.
Unfortunately, it is not the same repository as the Copley Library at the University of San Diego. They told us a few years ago that the J. S. Copley Library was disbanded when the owning organization went out of business and divested itself of newspapers it published and its library. They did not know, understandably, where the JSC material went, but it was sold by Sotheby?s in 2011. The catalogs are online, so the images of the documents are available! So, it remains a mystery where these documents might be now unless they appear in some other libraries? online catalogs. I imagine that they are, however, in private hands now!

Thanks to Ernie and Marilyn for your thoughts.

sometimes you get more details from both that are missing in the two different

Right now, someone at NUCMC is trying to figure out for us what the code JSC means for the library owning certain documents we are interested in for inclusion of their citations in our forthcoming book Connecticut in the American Revolution, eighth in our series. I was surprised when he called to say that he couldn?t figure it out either, but he?s checking some additional places!

Pam,

I'm not suggesting ArchiveGrid in place of the books. They cover different records.
The books cover records catalogued prior to 1985, but you will need to use the online version of NUCMC or ArchiveGrid to locate records catalogued since 1985 (or as late as 1993, depending on when you stopped purchasing the printed volumes).
ArchiveGrid also includes some of the records included in NUCMC prior to 1985, but only if the participating institution has a finding aid online for that collection and is participating with ArchiveGrid. Some of these online finding aids that ArchiveGrid leads to are actually much more informative than what you can find in NUCMC.

The books are great, and necessary for those earlier catalogued records. I was just suggesting ArchiveGrid as a more user-friendly alternative to the LOC's website version of NUCMC (for the more recently catalogued records) which you said was too difficult for your patrons.

To be honest, in comparing the records in the books, they are much better than the ones online. Also, the book indexes are very good.

Question. I'm sitting in my genealogy corner and randomly looking for titles free online. So far, I'm 3 for 3. If the information is online, then no one else would want them in hard copy...right? So, I can dispose of them respectfully?

Thoughts? I want to pare down to just my state and local county (and a few close surrounding.) I will compile a resource list of things we "had" that can now be found online. Any other advice for how to shape up this necessary, but unused portion of my library? (I've been here 2 months and it's had 2 visitors. Not worth the special seating, and extra shelving units it's costing me. This would make a primo reading area for the kiddos...)

Holly,

This type of collection can be a very sacred cow to some people. :)

Ask a lot of questions first. Is there a genealogy society in town that meets there or sends people there?

Do you have holdings that really belong to them?

Researchers in this field (genies) sometimes leave large contributions as a thank-you to library staff for helping them find things, or just for owning what they want to see.

If I were you, I?d watch for 6 months to a year first. Visitors may come around holiday times and increase the usage quite a bit.

Hi Holly,

A few thoughts. First, about twenty percent of the U.S. population does not have internet access. Some opt out (I'm too old to learn), some live in areas without internet service (yes, really), and some can't afford a computer/connection fees. We need to keep that twenty percent in mind as we make decisions about our collections and the way we provide service.

Second, do these titles circulate, or are they all reference? Often we make everything relating to genealogy/local history non-circ even if it's a how-to or local history title that would be convenient for the patron to take home to read. If they are reference, could they be transferred to circ? I for one prefer to read books in print format, not on a computer screen.

Third ,is it time to revisit or create a collection development policy for your "corner?" Is there another institution in your area (genealogical, historical, or academic) that you could donate your materials to if you really want to get out of the genealogical services business? Could you at least coordinate your holdings with those other places so that you aren't duplicating collections?

Do keep in mind that genealogy is now either the second or third most popular U.S. hobby, depending on which study you look at. Also, the collection might get more use if there were an enthusiastic, trained volunteer or staff person who was available to help with research questions. Even if an institution does not have a large genealogical collection, or any collection at all, it's still possible to provide good guidance to researchers.

When someone uses this collection and you see they have one of the books that is available online, tell them it is available on line and see what response you get.
The patron may be happy to know the book can be perused at leisure on their home computer (of course that is less foot traffic for your library, if that is an important statistic for you). Online accessibility varies greatly. Most do not allow printing from the site?you can only read online. Genealogy patrons usually want to print out their finding.
Response may also be:

?   I have no computer at home.

?   I don?t like/don?t know how to use the computer.

?   I can?t read very well on the computer.

?   The library computers are always tied up and I don?t like to/can?t wait for a turn.

?   I use a phone/tablet at home and it is too small to read.

?   I can?t download large files very quickly (or at all) using my home Internet service.

?   I can?t print from my device at home.

?   It?s too hard to use the online books because you can?t use the index and then just look up the pages you want very easily.

If there is a local society that maintains a library of its own, you could offer the less used items to them. However, if their library has very limited hours, which most do, you may have some unhappy people who no longer have easy access.

Good points! Also--we do have quite a few genealogists who prefer using the physical books, even though it is available digitized online (and for some types of books, the physical book can be easier to use and view--atlases, for example).

I think you also need to keep in mind that not everything online necessarily stays there forever. Things can be moved or deleted over time due to a variety of factors. Having a print book avoids that issue. If it's not being used or the information is dated, then that's a little different :)

Good points! Also--we do have quite a few genealogists who prefer using the physical books, even though it is available digitized online (and for some types of books, the physical book can be easier to use and view--atlases, for example).

Ask a lot of questions first. Is there a genealogy society in town that meets there or sends people there?
Do you have holdings that really belong to them?
Researchers in this field (genies) sometimes leave large contributions as a thank-you to library staff for helping them find things, or just for owning what they want to see.
If I were you, I?d watch for 6 months to a year first. Visitors may come around holiday times and increase the usage quite a bit.

Question. I'm sitting in my genealogy corner and randomly looking for titles free online. So far, I'm 3 for 3. If the information is online, then no one else would want them in hard copy...right? So, I can dispose of them respectfully?
Thoughts? I want to pare down to just my state and local county (and a few close found online. Any other advice for how to shape up this necessary, but unused portion of my library? (I've been here 2 months and it's had 2 visitors. Not worth the special seating, and extra shelving units it's costing me. This would make a primo reading area for the kiddos...)

Exactly the responses I often hear!   As much as I use some online books and other resources personally I must admit I often share the same reasoning and the last most of all. There are books that are a must for my personal use and many other I would love to own in hardcopy but simply cannot afford. I also have to chime in that it is sometimes easier, simpler and faster to look at a book in hard copy. OCR does not make everything easier to search.
    The Carnegie is also facing the fact of vanishing shelf space. At this point I have managed to keep from going crazy by removing duplicates of some books (not area county histories) but every time I remove a book that is only available in online format I cringe. They are backed up on an external hard drive since the drive space I have been given is not sufficient for my desires but I have lost information before to drive crashes and computer updates which makes me exceedingly paranoid about backups.
Nancy McCraw Ross
Carnegie Librarian

When someone uses this collection and you see they have one of the books that is available online, tell them it is available on line and see what response you get. The patron may be happy to know the book can be perused at leisure on their home computer (of course that is less foot traffic for your library, if that is an important statistic for you). Online accessibility varies greatly. Most do not allow printing from the site?you can only read online. Genealogy patrons usually want to print out their finding.
Response may also be:

?   I have no computer at home.

?   I don?t like/don?t know how to use the computer.

?   I can?t read very well on the computer.

?   The library computers are always tied up and I don?t like to/can?t wait for a turn.

?   I use a phone/tablet at home and it is too small to read.

?   I can?t download large files very quickly (or at all) using my home Internet service.

?   I can?t print from my device at home.

?   It?s too hard to use the online books because you can?t use the index and then just look up the pages you want very easily.

If there is a local society that maintains a library of its own, you could offer the less used items to them. However, if their library has very limited hours, which most do, you may have some unhappy people who no longer have easy access.

One thing I forgot to mention: If you are relying on online access, be very confident that the material will REMAIN accessible online. This is especially important if you are relying on access to a subscription database like HeritageQuest. Your library may not always have the funds for a subscription, or the content of the Web site could be changed by the owner. Google Books and others may be challenged in court again. One never knows.

What if the internet goes down? What if your computer crashes? And believe it or not, there are still folks out there who wouldn?t know how to use a digital copy to save their lives.

If you do decide to withdraw the books, at least offer them up to this list or to other libraries in your state. I do that sometimes if I have duplicates of the book in question.

When you find that an item is online, do you try to use it in that format?   Not all supposedly wonderful scans are easy to search. Example: you have to open sections separately, which is OK except when you have a page number as a reference, and don?t know which section that will be (my own recent experience).

As for material from other states, consider where the population of your state comes from. Look at the 1900 census for your city. If a large proportion of the residents give Mississippi as a birthplace, for instance, keep Mississippi stuff.
I?m betting you don?t need Wisconsin material any more than I need Arkansas sources.

And I second the advice on finding nearby libraries to refer your customers to.
By all means, give them first dibs on items which are not earning their keep.

Two visitors only? Perhaps outreach is what?s called for. An ?Introduction to Family History Resources at Your Library?? Reaching out to the high school for family history research projects? Yes, the kids will end up on the computer, no doubt. Of course, I don?t know a thing about your county or the books on your shelf you?re looking at, either.

I have to agree with others ? There are plenty of times that a hard copy is way easier to get fast answers from, or to peruse at leisure, or for those who can?t/won?t use the computer.

Even before the web existed as we know it today, I would tell people to go to their public library, and use its resources. Inevitably - and this was ?pre web? - some people would say ?my library doesn?t have anything.? I always figured the library had more than they thought, and they just didn?t understand how to make full use of it.

Well, if a library doesn?t have anything on its shelves because they?ve gotten rid of everything that?s online somewhere, what use will our libraries be? And not only that, we all know that there?s a lot "out there? on the web that most people will not find on their own without the professional guidance of a librarian (or other professional).

Even just this morning in my truncated session at the National Archives Virtual Genealogy Fair - https://www.archives.gov/calendar/genealogy-fair - I promoted library usage at least once.

Just my own opinion.

A couple of considerations here.

  Looking at your library's catalog, I see you have some miscellaneous material from other states. Were these gifts from local patrons and/or organizations?   You don't want to hurt anyone's feelings.

As someone else mentioned, you need to look at migration patterns into your area. Judging by a fast look at the 1850 census, you have a lot of people from Alabama so I'd keep those books. (Ancestry started having hissy fits while I was looking at your census so I didn't get further than a couple of townships.)

I see you have a local DAR chapter. Interest in our local chapters has been picking up lately -- maybe you can encourage it there. Invite them to hold a meeting at the library and get a personal tour of the genealogy resources. Ditto for any other lineage and history groups.
The Boy Scouts have a badge on this -- you could talk to them. Talk to local history teachers about projects and papers for their classes.
Show everyone how to use Ancestry and FamilySearch.

Believe it or not, in our library genealogy and local history accounts for more than 50% of our reference use. We've been pushing hard for years to maintain and grow this. Genealogists are also among our biggest library supporters.

And I too am very wary of sole dependence on things online. I've gone back and found whole sites have disappeared. Plus it is a lot easier to flip to the back of a book such as a collection of court minutes and start with the index than it is to wait while an entire book loads so you can get to the index.

Good luck.

Thanks. It is a shame that all of that material couldn?t have been saved as one collection somewhere else!

Eric, more notes on Copley Library:

There are several Copley libraries, or at least were.

James S Copley (1916 - 1973) endowed the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library at the University of San Diego (not to be confused with San Diego State University). James Copley was the long time owner of the San Diego Union-Tribune newspaper.

He also had a personal library called the James S Copley Library, which is described in a book he evidently commissioned; A Promise Kept: The Story of the James S. Copley Library. By Richard Reilly. San Diego: Copley Books, 1983. Copley died in 1973. His widow, Helen, continued the collection, and in 1982 she dedicated a new home for the library, on Kline Street in La Jolla.

The library is closed now, part of the Copley newspaper family?s sale of various properties in recent years, including The San Diego Union-Tribune. The Copley heir, David Copley evidently continued the collection. The Americana collection was auctioned off in 2010 at Sotheby?s in New York. Presumably portion of that library may exist in various public collections. David Copley, died in 2012 and his considerable estate was subsequently auctioned off at his death.
