I have an issue regarding Family Tree Maker. In short, a patron wants to transition from the 2008 version to the 2014 version of Family Tree Maker. The patron has reviewed several articles about doing this; however, he is unsure how to proceed, for he does not want to lose any saved data. I did recommend saving the data as a GEDCOM file. Is there anything else I can suggest?

So far as I can tell, versions of Family Tree Maker between 2008 and 2014 use the same underlying data format, so he should be able to open his 2008 files using 2014. (If he had been using an older version of the software, he would need to take additional steps.)

It is certainly helpful to create backup copies and put them elsewhere in case there are problems. A GEDCOM file will preserve the text information, but will not back up any media files.

PLEASE GIVE OUR PAST A FUTURE

The Danish Canadian Museum serves as a cultural center to display and celebrate the story of Danish Canadians both past and present.

Without members, sponsors, donations, and gifts the Museum would not be able to operate. More importantly, we would not be successful in educating and creating awareness and contributions of the Danish community in Canada.

I agree with Drew's earlier comment. Going from 2008 to 2017 shouldn't be a big deal. Copy the current file and stow it elsewhere until you know how things transitioned. Also, give the new file a different name so you don't overwrite what you had.

GEDCOMs won't transfer any media files.

I think years ago I went from a VERY early version of FTM to a Windows version and things went fine.

Here's the content that posted some time ago. I did the same a few years ago, and it went through fine.

For the last several years I have been writing a column for In Depth Genealogist online magazine, called Doing It Ourselves. There have been some great projects out there.

I am now looking for other such things to mention. These would be libraries, archives, genealogical or historical societies, etc. that are doing useful things for historical and family research. These would be 1000-1500 word articles, and I would contact the appropriate person at any location to see what they would be able to tell me about their projects.

Can anyone suggest some new places to look? Thanks very much!

That's very weird, because I can see everyone else's but not my own, and the settings are to let me see all of them.

Thanks for all who are helping to fix this.

Take a look at the Oregon-California Trail Association from Independence, MO. Definitely on the historical side.

Here's the content that posted some time ago. I did the same a few years ago, and it went through fine.

For the last several years I have been writing a column for In Depth Genealogist online magazine, called Doing It Ourselves. There have been some great projects out there.

I am now looking for other such things to mention. These would be libraries, archives, genealogical or historical societies, etc. that are doing useful things for historical and family research. These would be 1000-1500 word articles, and I would contact the appropriate person at any location to see what they would be able to tell me about their projects.

Can anyone suggest some new places to look? Thanks very much!

I think the comment about GEDCOMs not transferring media is incorrect-at least for the newer FTM editions. I exported a GEDCOM of my family tree, selected the option to include media, and all the media came over in both Rootsmagic and Legacy Family Tree. Relating to the transferred media, two things were lost. All my media captions are gone, and all the media links to my source citations are broken. The source media is still linked to the person but not to the source citation.

I agree with Drew's earlier comment. Going from 2008 to 2017 shouldn't be a big deal. Copy the current file and stow it elsewhere until you know how things transitioned. Also, give the new file a different name so you don't overwrite what you had.

GEDCOMs won't transfer any media files.

I think years ago I went from a VERY early version of FTM to a Windows version and things went fine.

I have an issue regarding Family Tree Maker. In short, a patron wants to transition from the 2008 version to the 2014 version of Family Tree Maker. The patron has reviewed several articles about doing this; however, he is unsure how to proceed, for he does not want to lose any saved data. I did recommend saving the data as a GEDCOM file. Is there anything else I can suggest?

GEDCOM files are, by their nature, text-only files. As such, they cannot contain media.

However, they can contain a link to media, so an import into RootsMagic can access the link to find the media.

All,

My current institution apparently took on that responsibility nearly a decade ago, when the local paper elected to discontinue arranging for microfilming themselves. We certainly find that the microfilm meets a community need; until recently, we haven't been able to offer access to the content of those back issues in any other way, and we do get requests for them.

Now, it has become possible for us to access the paper's recent historical content through a database subscription, and the microfilm is no longer as critical for access as it once was. I need to decide whether to continue with the microfilming and am curious about what the practice is in other places.

I would be happy to hear experiences and opinions from other list members.

Did you know? The 1940 and 1950 census enumeration district maps are online in the National Archives Catalog. Go to <https://catalog.archives.gov/advancedsearch> <<https://catalog.archives.gov/advancedsearch>> and where it says "search term" - type in enumeration district map (your state {or} your county) and where it says "Record Group Number" - type in 29. If you want to limit to one of those census years, you can add 1940 or 1950 to the search term. Confused? Try this sample search: 1950 enumeration district map cuyahoga

Our library has, in the past, microfilmed our local newspaper each year. Last year our newspaper office started sending us the newspaper on cd so microfilming is no longer necessary. We have over 100 rolls of microfilmed newspaper that we are having digitized in the very near future thanks to a grant from a local university.

Microfilming is still the preferred method of archival preservation. If no one else is microfilming this paper, I recommend you continue to do so. CDs are not a particularly stable medium for archival purposes, nor is digitization. Every time there is a software upgrade or a new type of software/hardware is invented and becomes the current norm, you will need to upgrade your digital files. With every upgrade comes the chance of corrupting or losing data. Digital files are easier to use and have the advantage of OCR searching, but don't rely on them for preservation. If your library does not want to keep the microfilm once the content is digitized, please find a good archive to give it to.

Our library has, in the past, microfilmed our local newspaper each year. Last year our newspaper office started sending us the newspaper on cd so microfilming is no longer necessary. We have over 100 rolls of microfilmed newspaper that we are having digitized in the very near future thanks to a grant from a local university. Teresa

Leslie,

Our newspaper sends the papers to our microfilm vendor. The vendor then creates the master, makes a microfilm from the master for us, and then sends the microfilm to us. We are also not the only library in the state who receives a microfilmed copy of our paper, the state library does as well.

We were looking at databases to support the research of the microfilm, but would continue getting the microfilm. Unfortunately in our case we are going to be unable to get the database at this time. However what my staff and I found during the trial period of using the database, was that we used it to narrow the date so we could then go to the microfilm and print the article, photo, or obit.

The drawback to the database we were considering is that it does not include photos and the obituaries were separated out from the main newspaper. While the photos in the microfilm are not always the best, they are still the only source of the photo in most cases that I have found. Also being a bit of a "worst case scenario planner" with the microfilm once you own it, it cannot be cut if there is a future budget concern.

I look forward to hearing everyone else's thoughts on this as well.

We have long filmed many of the small local papers in West Virginia for preservation purposes that were not filmed by contract by a commercial microfilmer paid by the newspaper company. We are continuing to microfilm those papers, and have also begun to film some of the ones that are still available on commercial microfilm because it is cheaper to film ourselves than to buy it. As the State Archives, we bear a greater responsibility to preserve the state's newspapers, of course.

Some questions to consider: Is another institution in your state microfilming this newspaper for preservation? Does the digital subscription include all back issues to the date of the last microfilm roll? Can you guarantee your library will always be able to afford the digital subscription, and that the back issues will always be accessible? Is the digital version the same as the print version, with all of the illustrations, classified ads and advertisements? (Sometimes the photo that accompanies an obituary may be the only one a future descendant will be able to find, or the newspaper photographs of a local disaster are different from those available from other sources. Also, advertisements present a portrait of the business community at that time, and often play a role in legal action that may not take place until years later.)

Newspapers in Oklahoma are microfilmed by the Oklahoma Historical Society. We pay for copies of our local newspaper microfilm which is mailed to us regularly. The local newspaper company did microfilming for a time, but discontinued it.

We also have paid access to a database which includes the same newspaper for many years, but we have found that we can't always find some items people want such as ads, photographs, and the all important obituaries. And, who knows when that database will cease to exist, although we do use it and many times as a finding tool as someone else mentioned.

The Oklahoma Press Association, which was formed way before statehood, had a policy for member newspapers to send a copy of each issue to OHS. Of course, a few newspapers did not cooperate, but most did and continue to do so. This resulted in an unbelievably newspaper collection which was microfilmed when that technology became available. In addition to being able to view the microfilm from all over Oklahoma at OHS in Oklahoma City, they are creating a huge newspaper website of all Oklahoma newspapers before 1922 which is an unbelievable research tool. Check it out on The Gateway to Oklahoma History.

And if you're interested in Oklahoma, the Oklahoma Health Department launched a birth and death index in January (not the images, an index). It is OK2explore. What is amazing about this is the fact that they made it available six months ahead of schedule. How often do we see that?

We microfilm our newspaper and will continue to do so. The paper itself no longer buys a copy of film and their staff come to the library when needed. We have our local paper on microfilm from 1786 to present. 1994 to present is available in a database. However, the database does not include any obituaries which is what genealogists want! Obits are in America's Obit database and not consistently there. The newspaper database only includes articles written by staff and we find not all are included. Opinions, letters to the editor, press releases, etc. are not in the database. Current ownership of the paper just wants to sell that day's paper and has the online version behind a paywall and is not interested in allowing digitizing of the older microfilm.

We acquired a 18x24 Scanner and digitize some of our old newspapers and documents.

If we wish to do so, we can send our digital files to a vendor and have them put on microfilm.

While this is still being debated, I don't think you need their permission to digitize the microfilm, especially if you are not charging for access or selling the digitized version.

Subject: [Genealib] microfilming newspaper

We microfilm our newspaper and will continue to do so. The paper itself no longer buys a copy of film and their staff come to the library when needed. We have our local paper on microfilm from 1786 to present. 1994 to present is available in a database. However, the database does not include any obituaries which is what genealogists want! Obits are in America's Obit database and not consistently there. The newspaper database only includes articles written by staff and we find not all are included. Opinions, letters to the editor, press releases, etc. are not in the database. Current ownership of the paper just wants to sell that day's paper and has the online version behind a paywall and is not interested in allowing digitizing of the older microfilm.

GEDCOM files are, by their nature, text-only files. As such, they cannot contain media.

However, they can contain a link to media, so an import into RootsMagic can access the link to find the media.

I think the comment about GEDCOMs not transferring media is incorrect?at least for the newer FTM editions. I exported a GEDCOM of my family tree, selected the option to include media, and all the media came over in both Rootsmagic and Legacy Family Tree. Relating to the transferred media, two things were lost. All my media captions are gone, and all the media links to my source citations are broken. The source media is still linked to the person but not to the source citation.

All,

My current institution apparently took on that responsibility nearly a decade ago, when the local paper elected to discontinue arranging for microfilming themselves. We certainly find that the microfilm meets a community need; until recently, we haven't been able to offer access to the content of those back issues in any other way, and we do get requests for them.

Now, it has become possible for us to access the paper's recent historical content through a database subscription, and the microfilm is no longer as critical for access as it once was. I need to decide whether to continue with the microfilming and am curious about what the practice is in other places.

I would be happy to hear experiences and opinions from other list members.

Did you know? The 1940 and 1950 census enumeration district maps are online in the National Archives Catalog. Go to <https://catalog.archives.gov/advancedsearch> <<https://catalog.archives.gov/advancedsearch>> and where it says "search term" - type in enumeration district map (your state {or} your county) and where it says "Record Group Number" - type in 29. If you want to limit to one of those census years, you can add 1940 or 1950 to the search term. Confused? Try this sample search: 1950 enumeration district map cuyahoga

Our library has, in the past, microfilmed our local newspaper each year. Last year our newspaper office started sending nus the newspaper on cd so microfilming is no longer necessary. We have over 100 rolls of microfilmed newspaper that we are having digitized in the very near future thanks to a grant from a local university.

Microfilming is still the preferred method of archival preservation. If no one else is microfilming this paper, I recommend you continue to do so. CDs are not a particularly stable medium for archival purposes, nor is digitization. Every time there is a software upgrade or a new type of software/hardware is invented and becomes the current norm, you will need to upgrade your digital files. With every upgrade comes the chance of corrupting or losing data. Digital files are easier to use and have the advantage of OCR searching, but don't rely on them for preservation. If your library does not want to keep the microfilm once the content is digitized, please find a good archive to give it to.

(I am not thinking here of purchasing duplicate copies of the microfilm, but of being the entity that contracts to have the original papers filmed to create the master copy.)

My current institution apparently took on that responsibility nearly a decade ago, when the local paper elected to discontinue arranging for microfilming themselves. We certainly find that the microfilm meets a community need; until recently, we haven?t been able to offer access to the content of those back issues in any other way, and we do get requests for them.

Now, it has become possible for us to access the paper?s recent historical content through a database subscription, and the microfilm is no longer as critical for access as it once was. I need to decide whether to continue with the microfilming and am curious about what the practice is in other places.

I would be happy to hear experiences and opinions from other list members.

We still purchase the microfilm, though it is getting more expensive. I like owning the information and it is the most stable format. I looked at our bill sover the last 10 years or so and it has risen astronomically. I complained to the vendor and they took away this year's price increase, at least. We do pay for a subscription to a database, but it isn't long-term storage, it's current access. We are also paying subscribers to our newspapers. This means I have access to the last month's worth of newspapers and can download them as a pdf file. I go in to the site once a month and download all the papers as pdfs and store them on our server. But, I reminded that this isn't a stable format and, expensive or not, we have to still pay for microfilm.

Wow, thanks everybody for sharing your experiences and your thoughts on my dilemma.

Your collective wisdom is reinforcing the strand of my thinking that is really a big fan of microfilm for long term preservation considerations, and that thinks we should continue with microfilming as the best way to ensure long-term access for our patrons. (And, yes, as far as reasonable effort can determine, we are the only ones microfilming this paper. We actually arrange to deposit the master with the State Library for long term preservation and get a duplicate service copy for our use.)

When I sometimes begin to question this perspective it is usually because I've just read something new arguing that market forces will kill microfilm in the near future, because there won't be enough demand to support continued production of film and equipment. It seems like I've seen increasing amounts of that kind of talk over the last six months. The estimate we recently got for microfilming the last 2 years worth of the paper is still manageable for us, but the cost is definitely increasing at a faster rate than our other expenditures. The pragmatic devil on my other shoulder is whispering that if the signs point to microfilm dying in a few years anyway, perhaps I should stop now and figure out what the highest priority goal is that I could achieve by reallocating the microfilming budget.

For now, I'm leaning towards another round of microfilming and some watchful waiting about what's going to happen in the marketplace over the next year or two.

But that's the substance of the debate that's playing out in my mind as I weigh the pros and cons. Thanks to all for helping me think this out.

A number of our local newspapers were discontinued in recent years, and the new ones that have appeared have shown no interest in microfilming their own files. The last time we did microfilming of local papers was in 2012. We have held onto file copies of current papers (weeklies and bi-weeklies) since 2012 with the expectation of filming them as funding allows. Our newspapers prior to 1963 have been digitized, and those prior to 1951 have been posted online as part of our Digital Library.

Hi all,

The problem we have locally is that our newspaper is born digital and the paper has absolutely no incentive to microfilm the paper as they keep a digital archive for themselves. The local university has continued microfilming the paper, but we are unable to purchase our own copies because the cost from Heritage Microfilms is wildly cost prohibitive. We discontinued purchasing the film at the end of 2007.

We offer our patrons the digital paper for the last few years in a database offered through the Utah State Library. Then, for our own preservation needs, we have reverted to binding the newspapers in two month groupings. This, according to preservationists at the University of Utah, is actually a good method because it protects (other than the edges of the paper) the paper from light and air. Moisture is seldom a problem in our desert climate. The only residual problem is shelf space. Binding the papers also saves the papers for any future preservation process we may want to undertake.

I'm not sure what will happen in the future. Maybe money will be found and then we can use the physical papers we're saving for the microfilm process. Until then, patrons often use these books and simply snap photos of the pages with their phones.

Grapevine, Texas is a medium-sized community of 50,000. Our newspaper, The Grapevine Sun, ran from 1895 to April 2009 when it ceased publication. At various times it was published either weekly or twice a week. We have all available issues on microfilm up to that point. The microfilm was donated to the library by the historical society in 1979; it was the first genealogical acquisition the library made. I don't know how long the society had it, but we continued to have it microfilmed until its demise. The Sun is now entirely available on NewspaperArchive.com. We have access to NewspaperArchive and will also keep the microfilm indefinitely.

Librarians and Local Historians Day at the 2017 New England Regional Genealogical Conference in Springfield will feature Bob (Robert) Anderson, The Great Migration Study, as luncheon speaker.

Genealogy and family history research continues to trend with the public, presenting an opportunity for historical societies and libraries. Curt Witcher of the Allen County Public Library will detail how genealogy can attract interest and funding for both groups. Rhonda Clark and Nicole Wedemeyer Miller's book, Fostering Family History Services, includes ideas for how partnerships between the two communities of practice can benefit both. Rhonda will share their findings in person. Curt's second presentation highlights cost-effective public domain resources for genealogical reference that don't require a budget. Panelist Rachel Onuf, the roving archivist for Massachusetts, will talk about this Massachusetts program. Register at www.nergc.org <<http://www.nergc.org>> : $40 for the day, 26 April 2017. Luncheon sponsored by ProQuest. Full conference registration not required.

Good morning everyone,

I received a question about the 1850 Census that I wasn't 100% certain how to answer, so I'm hoping someone might be able to help.

A patron has been looking into the 1850 Census (see attache) to try to track some ancestors, and is wondering if there is any way to track columns one and two ('Dwelling houses-numbered in the order of visitation' and 'Families numbered in the order of visitation'). More specifically, he wants to know if these numbers are on maps somewhere, or if they could be used to place the families geographically within the township for which the Census is taken.

Any help would be appreciated!

Best,
Robbin

?Hi Robbin,

Unfortunately, these numbers do not tell you anything about where the people lived, as they are literally the order the census walked down the street in. The dwelling and family numbers are different as often more than one family lived in a dwelling (such as a duplex). They also don't tell you much about where on the street it is located, as census takers may have walked back and forth across a street or turned randomly.

In later census records, beginning in 1880, the actual house number and street is listed.

For this particular case, I think property records would be the natural next step, since the residents are farmers or laborers. From there one might obtain geographical locations.

If you have a plat map of a time period within about 15 years, you might be able to figure out the route that way as well. And/or use one in conjunction with deeds.

Hi Guys,

I need to locate the authors of the books "No Land.Only Slaves: A Different Look at Deeds" I stumbled across this set two years ago and have not been able to track down the authors to determine if they have any additional copies for sale. I have Edith Smith and Vivan Lehman in Balch Springs, Texas.

There is a telephone no. on the FB page; click on Call now. Also if you click on "see more" it says copies are available to libraries and archives; you might try that. Worldcat shows copies available in a number of places around the country.

A diligent researcher could studiously:
compare the 1880 enumeration including the actual house number and street to the families with similar surnames on the earlier census(es) to gain an approximation of the house locations.

Muriel,

St Louis Public owns 18 volumes of the set, so it would appear they are continuing to purchase. The catalog entry has them cataloged as a set but there is a description of the content of each volume. Perhaps they could give you the information they use to purchase.

Muriel,

I just recently purchased the latest 2 sets of books in January from them. I have Ms. Edith Smith's email that I'd be glad to share with you, and anyone else interested, via direct email.

Hi Guys,

I need to locate the authors of the books "No Land...Only Slaves: A Different Look at Deeds" I stumbled across this set two years ago and have not been able to track down the authors to determine if they have any additional copies for sale. I have Edith Smith and Vivian Lehman in Balch Springs, Texas.

Hello to all;

Does anyone have a directory of photographers for the late 1800s or early 1900s? I'm trying to track down a particular photography studio from NJ. City directories for the time frame are not very complete for the time frame I want.

If you have a directory, and can let me know off-list, I'll tell you exactly what I'm looking for.

Thanks in advance,

Kim

Hi Kim:

I just happened to catch your question and remembered a book we have in our library called:

<<http://catalog.irclibrary.org/polaris/search/title.aspx?ctx=1.1033.0.0.1&pos=1>> Photographers : a sourcebook for historical research : featuring Richard Rudisill's Directories of photographers: an annotated bibliography

<<http://catalog.irclibrary.org/polaris/search/title.aspx?ctx=1.1033.0.0.1&pos=5>> Directory of photographers in the United States 1888 & 1889 and Canada 1889 by Diane Gagel

<<http://catalog.irclibrary.org/polaris/search/title.aspx?ctx=1.1033.0.0.1&pos=7>> American photographers : an illustrated who's who among leading contemporary Americans

There are also many books that have been published by state. Check worldcat.org

If you send a request to genealogy at irclibrary.org <mailto:genealogy at irclibrary.org> perhaps someone can look it up for you.

Good luck.

Pam

In Wisconsin, a directory by city of names and dates was compiled from the Wisconsin State Gazetteer and Business Directory, an R. L. Polk publication. There is surely something similar for New Jersey.

Kim,

Photographers often advertised in newspapers to attract customers. Even itinerant photogs advertised. You might try searching the various newspaper databases ...

Kim,

The NYPL has started a database of information about photographers from the past, called Photographers' Identity Catalog or PIC: <http://pic.nypl.org/>

People in Buffalo, NY have such a thing: the whole article appeared in In Depth Genealogist online magazine -

"Recently the President of the Western New York Genealogical Society asked their Facebook friends to mention any projects that they are working on. Did she ever get a lot of them! Pretty much in order of response I would like to mention a few of these.

Janice Jezewski Rossi has a project that attempts to document the photographers who worked in Buffalo NY from 1839-1940. This by its nature involves a lot of genealogy work. She writes that she has been working on this project for almost 30 years. So what does this involve? The name of the photographer, birth, and death dates, family names and a short biography. It also mentions when he was in business and where that business was located. Why is this important to genealogy searchers? As she explained, she can tell you where a photographer was at a specific address. That may narrow down the dates for a picture to just a few years"

Thanks! Someone has compiled a list and I was able to get it from another Genea-Lib person. I have it narrowed down to a 13 yr period when the photographer was at this particular address.

In Wisconsin, a directory by city of names and dates was compiled from the Wisconsin State Gazetteer and Business Directory, an R. L. Polk publication. There is surely something similar for New Jersey.

Hello to all;

Does anyone have a directory of photographers for the late 1800s or early 1900s? I'm trying to track down a particular photography studio from NJ. City directories for the time frame are not very complete for the time frame I want.

If you have a directory, and can let me know off-list, I'll tell you exactly what I'm looking for.

Thanks in advance,

Land records contain a wealth of genealogical, historical and legal information. Depending upon the type and time period, they may offer new insights about your ancestors and family history. In addition to providing location and date of settlement, records may attest to one's age, place of birth, citizenship, military service, literacy, and economic status. RELIC's Darlene Hunter will provide examples of various land records and explain how to locate them.

RESEARCHING PRINCE WILLIAM'S EARLIEST HISTORY

Europeans first visited Prince William County in 1608: John Smith explored the Potomac River a year after Jamestown was settled. English settlers came to stay in 1650s, taking out large land grants along the Potomac River. Fairfax Harrison named the earliest settlers and their grants, and described what happened during the Susquehannock war and Bacon's Rebellion, but there is still much to be written about Prince William during the seventeenth century.

Prince William County was not established until 1731. During the previous century, this region was part of earlier jurisdictions: 1645-1653: Northumberland County. 1653-1666: Westmoreland County. 1666-1731: Stafford County. Surviving records from those courthouses are necessary to understand local events.

Here are a few works that may be useful for research in that time:

Fairfax Harrison, Landmarks of Old Prince William: a study of origins in Northern Virginia. (Richmond, 1924; reprinted by the Prince William County Historical Commission in 1987) 724 pp, ill., maps.

Nell Marion Nugent, Cavaliers and Pioneers: Abstracts of Virginia Land Patents and Grants, v. 1, 1623-1666 (Richmond: Dietz Press, 1934; repr. Virginia State Library and Archives, 1992); v. 2, 1666-1695 (Richmond: Virginia State Library, 1977). Indexes people, including headrights, and geographic names.

About the Virginia Land Office Patents and Grants/Northern Neck Grant and Surveys. <http://www.lva.virginia.gov/public/guides/opac/lonnabout.htm> Includes images of Virginia land grants.

William Waller Hening, The Statutes at Large: being a collection of all the laws of Virginia ? [1619-1792] 13 v. (1819-23, repr. University Press of Virginia, 1969).

Stephen R. Potter, Commoners, Tribute and Chiefs: The Development of Algonquian Culture in the Potomac Valley. (Charlottesville: University Press of Virginia, 1993) A useful synthesis of what is known about Native American settlements in this region.

William Fitzhugh and His Chesapeake World, 1676-1701: the Fitzhugh letters and other documents, edited by Richard Beale Davis (Chapel Hill: Univ. of North Carolina Press, 1963) Documents of an important figure in northern Virginia.

Bacon's Rebellion: Abstracts of Materials in the Colonial Records Project, compiled by John Davenport Neville. (The Jamestown Foundation, n.d.) Many other documents discovered in Great Britain relating to this time period can be found at About the Virginia Colonial Records Project.

Subject: [Genealib] Ancestry and Roots Magic connection

Message-ID: <F946509CFF48A14E83FE81D7FB74C95F16691C94@VONNEGUT.mcpl.local>

Hi everyone,

I am hoping someone will be able to help me with a question that came up today. A lady asked if Rootsmagic and Ancestry were going to work together. She thought she had heard or read something about it. What she really wants is to be able to save her family tree information that she has on Ancestry (in one humongous tree) to a CD or even print it out. I am assuming that what she thought would happen is that she could use Rootsmagic via Ancestry to do this or vice versa. I'm no expert on Ancestry or Rootsmagic so I had no clue. Hopefully one or more of you will be able to help me to help her. In the meantime, I will do some research on the subject myself. I'm always up for on-the-job education! ?

Subject: [Genealib] Fairfax County Virginia Room books to trade
Message-ID: <CAA5Zxu-pYH6bH9ed9qM1Cv56e_465QMPAQBcytNVfLoj6qDbHg@mail.gmail.com>

Fairfax County Public Library's Virginia Room has more books to trade. Please respond to our volunteer, Fran, at Bfm1010 at cox.net and Frances.Millhouser2 at fairfaxcounty.gov . Be sure to include your mailing address in your email so that we can make your mailing label. There's an Excel and a pdf version of the same list, so I hope everyone will be able to open it.

If you don't have anything to trade, please send a check for postage reimbursement (made out to Fairfax County Public Library) to

Laura Wickstead
Virginia Room
10360 North St.
Fairfax, VA 22030

Trades are allotted on a first-come, first-served basis. The volunteer will include a ?packing list? of your requests in your shipment with a check mark indicating that the book is included in the shipment, or an N/A meaning that the item is Not Available because someone else?s request was received before yours.

Introduction to Genealogical Librarianship

Instructor: Sarah A.V. Kirby
Dates: May 1st through 28th, 2017
Credits: 1.5 CEUs
Price: $175

<http://libraryjuiceacademy.com/056-genealogical.php>

Most short courses in genealogical librarianship actually focus on genealogy and only discuss library concerns briefly. This course seeks to reverse that. While a brief introduction to genealogy will be given, the majority of the course will focus on collection development, reference interviews, programming, and support for genealogical researchers. By the end of the course you will understand how genealogy reference interviews differ from normal reference interviews. You will also be familiar with the core print and online references needed to support most basic genealogical questions. Finally, you will have been introduced to some of the resources that can help you develop programming or be used in other ways to support your genealogical reference activities.

Sarah A.V. Kirby is a librarian, professional genealogist, teacher, and rocket scientist (aerospace engineer). As a genealogist her specialization is in New England, New York, and the Midwest. Sarah holds a Professional Learning Certificate in Genealogical Studies, concentrating in Genealogical Librarianship, from the National Institute for Genealogical Studies. She serves as the lead volunteer librarian for the Lake County (IL) Genealogical Society. She has been a corporate librarian for over a decade, and operates a library services consulting firm, Appletree Knowledge Services. In her first career, she worked at NASA's Mission Control and worked in the Space Shuttle, Astronaut on Mir, and Space Station programs.

This is an online class that is taught asynchronously, meaning that participants do the work on their own time as their schedules allow. The class does not meet together at any particular times, although the instructor may set up optional synchronous chat sessions. Instruction includes readings and assignments in one-week segments. Class participation is in an online forum environment.

You can register in this course through the first week of instruction (as long as it is not full). The "Register" button on the website goes to our credit card payment gateway, which may be used with personal or institutional credit cards. (Be sure to use the appropriate billing address). If your institution wants us to send a billing statement or wants to pay using a purchase order, please contact us by email to make arrangements: inquiries at libraryjuiceacademy.com

AMEN to this! I just deleted 14 "Thank You's...." This is why I do not set it when I leave for vacation. I figure what the sender doesn't know won't hurt me or them.

The only time I have set it was when I was away for a month and was not able to check my e-mail often to keep it cleaned out. I unsubscribed from my listservs and subscribed again when I returned, and listed a couple of co-workers' e-mails in my away message as referrals for certain types of questions, etc.

Hello!

The Seattle Genealogical Society has the following periodical issues available on a first come, first serve basis, in exchange for postage reimbursement. The issues are unbound and have been used, often having ownership markings.

If you're interested in any of these issues, please contact me via email and include your library address in your reply. If you have questions, please direct them to me as well.
