Senate Pushes Plan For Stockpile Probe

WASHINGTON, March 26 (UPI)—State investigators, their path cleared to new information by presidential order, today pushed plans for an investigation of the nation's $7.7 billion strategic stockpile.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said he might have a statement today regarding the investigation by his subcommittee, expected to open soon.

Symington praised President Kennedy for his action yesterday removing secrecy from 12 major items in the stockpile.

The information would include the amount by which supplies in the stockpile exceed actual wartime needs.

Kennedy's action was taken at Symington's request, and the senator intends to take up the 12 items first in its hearings.

The President asked Symington to make the investigations after telling a Jan. 31 news conference that he found the size of the stockpile astonishingly large. Kennedy said the stores of such things as aluminum and nickel were a potential source of unconscionable profits.

The materials which will be stripped of secrecy are aluminum, metallurgical grade chromium, cobalt, copper, lead, metallurgical grade manganese, molybdenum, nickel, rubber, tin, tungsten and zinc.

The information to be made public will include the current maximum and minimum goals, the present stock and the excess amount of each, to be given in dollars and units.

Symington said the 12 products represented three-fourths of the stockpile both in quantity and value.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., who also had urged declassification of the materials, said he hoped it would be "the first installment on complete declassification."

Byrd said he was "reliably informed that within the next few days effort will be made to declassify" the stockpile completely "with the exception of relatively few items which cannot be made public in the interest of national security."

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., complained that Kennedy was releasing stockpile information piecemeal and said it was a "complete absurdity" for the President to maintain secrecy on some other items.

INTERVIEW WITH EXPERT

Elder Fears, Needs Cited

By ROBERT PETERSON TOPEKA, Kan. — Dr. Will Menninger, 61, and his brother Karl, 69, have made their family name synonymous with psychiatry. Here on 70, sunny, sloping acres at the west edge of town they head what is generally considered to be the finest center for research and treatment of mental illness in the world.

Taking note of our rising numbers of elders and the emotional problems attendant to retirement, the Menningers two years ago organized a Retirement and Geriatric Service which has become one of five clinical services offered by their famed Menninger Clinic. Heading this important new section is geriatrician Dr. Prescott W. Thompson.

When I stopped at Dr. Thompson's office recently I asked what fears are particularly apparent among older people today.

"A leading one is the fear of helplessness," replied this tall, kindly physician. "Although only a small per cent of all older people become fully dependent on others, this dull, throbbing fear of invalidism plagues many elders."

"We can help these people by reminding them that their chances of escaping helplessness are very good—provided they remain physically and mentally active."

What about the principal needs of older people — aside from health and income? "I'd say it's their need to feel useful and important. Many retired people wither largely because they have few chances to demonstrate their usefulness. Minus the demands of their job and family responsibilities they tend to lose self-confidence.

"Just about everyone, regardless of age, has potentials for useful service. We need to remind elders of this fact and do what we can to create opportunities for them so they can use their skills and abilities."

"Sometimes you'll find an older person who merely sits day-after-day and insists he doesn't want to do anything. In these cases we must try to understand the factors which stand in his way and use our powers of persuasion to spark his interest and get him to use such abilities as he has before he loses them."

It's good to know that a clinic as important as Menninger's is taking an organized interest in aging. Although bidding the boss goodbye may loom as an easy, inviting prospect, scientists are finding that it's more of a trick than most folks realize to achieve a successful, well-adjusted emotional life in retirement.

Trouble Haunts Tabor

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Think

you've had a tough day? Draftsman Don Tabor went hunting on New River Mesa near Phoenix. He lost his footing and dropped his rifle. The weapon accidentally discharged, wounding Tabor in the forearm.

His friends started to haul him to camp on a cross-country scooter. A wheel on the vehicle twisted and Tabor was tossed into a pile of rocks. He injured his knee.

Then a pickup truck sped him toward town. A car ahead stopped. The pickup slammed into the rear of the car. Tabor was pitched into the dashboard, shattering his glasses and reopening the gunshot wound.

By now Tabor needed an ambulance. One was called. On the way to a hospital a motorist got in the way of the ambulance. The ambulance driver swerved his vehicle violently and narrowly avoided a crash. Tabor was bounced around and frightened but not further injured.

Questions Answered On Cerebral Palsy

By W. C. ALVAREZ, M.D.
The National Society for Crippled Children and Adults at 2023 W. Ogden Ave. in Chicago has just published an excellent booklet on cerebral palsy which sells for 25 cents. (Send to them for it—not to me.)

It represents the answers of Dr. Meyer Perlstein as he talked with Earl Schenck Miers, who is an able writer and who, himself, suffers from cerebral palsy. The booklet is for parents to help them in understanding the problems presented by their handicapped child.

Actually, it can help parents with any handicapped child. As Mr. Miers says, many of the difficulties that plague the palsied child originate in the confusion of his parents as they try to cope with his problems.

First, it is well to know that cerebral palsy does not mean a single disease but a group of conditions. Naturally, much depends on how much nervous or brain damage the child has, and which of his difficulties can be overcome with medical help. These children have an extra amount of trouble when they get tense and nervous.

To illustrate, Dr. Perlstein says that teachers may spend 10 years getting a badly palsied child to the point where he can button his shirt. He can do this when he is calm, but if he gets excited over something, he fails. Then, when he tries again to button his shirt, he remembers his failure, and this makes for more tension and more failure.

The wise parent has to learn to help his child without, at the same time, over-indulging him and hurting him with too much worry about his situation. It is possible to make an emotional cripple out of the child. Parents tend to communicate to him their great anxiety.

The parents must allow a handicapped child as much independence as possible. Where parents have two or three bright children they must not spend 90 per cent of their attention, their love, and their money on the much-retarded child. This is very wrong.

The big thing with any handicapped child is to help him to develop and then to live at the top limit determined by the amount of ability he has. Also, he must not be over-protected but allowed to do everything he can do for himself. The parents must not set up goals for the child which are beyond what he can do.

There is much that the parents can do in the way of physiotherapy if they are well taught. Naturally, some children are much helped by braces of various kinds.

When a parent asks how much disciplining or punishment should be given to a handicapped child, Dr. Perlstein says, just as much as you give to a normal child. As Mr. Miers says, there are a number of other diseases which are still being hidden and hushed up too much, diseases like epilepsy and psychosis.

Trampoline—'Just Like Driving'

By JOHN GULLETT
Physical education major Dave Carmolli describes his thrilling rebound-tumbling act as "like driving your car while in top physical condition."

Dave, a 25-year-old junior at USF, has a long record of honors on the rebound-tumbling apparatus, commonly but incorrectly referred to as the trampoline. He started practicing in high school in his native Medford, Mass., with the purpose of perfecting certain techniques in 3 meter diving, a sport in which he won the New England AAU championship.

The "tramp" was just as rewarding, for a few months later Dave entered competition with universities in the New England

AAU, and won over all entries. After winning the title among universities in six states three years running, Dave entered other areas of gymnastics; but his first love was still the tramp. Upon graduation from high school, Dave was quickly grabbed up by Florida State University on a gymnastics scholarship. One year later he finished among the top ten tumbler in the country in NCAA competition, which gave him All-America status. Among his wins was the southern inter-collegiate meet at FSU in 1958, involving more than a dozen universities.

Lives In Largo

Dave and Pat, his wife since December of 1960, now live in Largo, where he works with local recreation officials in promoting rebound tumbling and other forms of gymnastics as a means of maintaining physical fitness.

While not attending class at USF, Dave is touring around the state giving exhibitions and aiding in the establishment of programs for young people. He appeared on a national television program, the Arlene Francis Show, while at FSU.

Dave hopes to finish his undergraduate training here, but is more interested at the moment in establishing a major interest in gymnastics on campus. He took the initial step by organizing the Gymnastics Club last semester.

"I am primarily interested in physical fitness," Dave commented, and rebound tumbling is the means to this goal.

Takes Control

"The aspect of mental control is very important. When you find yourself in mid-air and on the way down, it takes quick decision-making to perform a somersault, or the more complicated twisting double somersault, without injuring your body."

The apparatus used for the stunts was invented by George Nissen, and received its biggest boost during World War II, when the service used it to help orient new pilots to the sensation of the many positions in the air that they would encounter during actual flight.

"From there it spread to the training of Olympic divers," added Dave, "with people still referring to it by its trade name, Trampoline. It's similar, I suppose to the popular use of the trade name Thermos for vacuum bottle, and Jello for gelatin dessert."

Now World Sport

Regardless of the term used to describe it, rebound tumbling has become a world sport. So much so, that people like Dave are looking for its addition on the roster of sports in the 1964 Olympics.

Over 10,000 schools in the U.S. use Nissen's trampoline, the most popular in the world, and several organizations use the products of the other manufacturers.

Asked if the average person could safely "bounce around" on the tramp, Dave asserted: "It's just as safe as swimming, providing the student learns the fundamentals and uses common sense. The Gym Club on campus is looking for people interested in developing the mind and body through the means of the tramp."

Some Do Twist

Like any sport, rebound tumbling has its more difficult aspects that only serious students attempt. "The twisting double somersault is perhaps the most difficult," Dave commented, "and only a handful of people in the world do it."

but he rarely inserts the dangerous task in his exhibition. "My purpose is to entertain the people; and the other complicated forms of tumbling, such as the triple somersault, serve that purpose."

When the body hits the apparatus following a twisting double somersault, it may dart out and off in any direction with great speed."

BASKETBALL

John Wade poured in four points on two easy layups in the last 18 seconds of play last Monday to give the Enotas Fraternal Society a 40-36 All-University basketball championship win over the independent All-Stars.

The win gave the Enotas 150 Activity points and culminated five weeks of round-table activity involving 18 intramural teams.

Enotas now lead in the Activity-Points race by 30 over The All-Stars, 485-455. Alpha II-W is the nearest competitor at 290.

VOLLEYBALL

Teams may still add new players to their roster before their second volleyball contest of the season this week. All games this week are quarter-final matches involving survivors of the 18-team first round of the single elimination tourney.

Next week will see the semi-finals and final matches played, with the winner receiving 100 points.

In other intramural activity, the softball league for men will begin early in April, with the women's league beginning at the same time.

A swimming meet for men and women has been set for May 24 and May 29. Golf and tennis will follow.

LEGISLATURE

Shift of Power Is Suggested

By LOUISE STEWART

One of the current problems before the Student Association legislature is the recommendation that executive power should be vested solely in the president who would use the Executive Council merely in an advisory capacity.

Mike Shea, chairman of the Constitution Evaluation Committee gave this recommendation at the student legislature meeting recently. Another problem which promises to give the legislators real headaches is that regarding election and terms of office under the new trimester program beginning next fall.

Under executive business, vice-president Frank Meiners distributed the revised rules of procedure and then made the announcement that all civic units should meet on April 4, the Wednesday immediately prior to the next legislature meeting Thursday, April 5.

Bray Says, "No."

Tal Bray, chairman of the Election Rules Committee, was asked at this time if students would be allowed to vote by absentee ballot. Bray later announced a definite "no" to this question.

Ralph Tindell, chairman of the Civic Unit Improvement Committee, had no definite progress to report.

Under the heading of old business, the food-service bill came up for a second reading after being approved by the executive council. This bill advocates a voluntary food service plan in which commuting students could purchase a food card for one per day for a specified number of days. The bill was passed.

Much Discussion

Most of this meeting however was taken up in a discussion of the suggested constitutional revisions and at one point the entire legislature adjourned so that the body might act as a committee discussion. Shea said he wanted to get all the snags and fine points straightened out before he presented his committee's findings in the form of amendments.

USF Host For Spring Meeting

USF will host the spring meeting of the Florida Speech and Hearing Association on March 30 and 31. David Chaswell Wins Hour Of Free Billiards

Recently the 10,000th student card for the billiard tables was processed. David Chaswell, a first semester freshman, received an hour free play of pocket billiards.

Erwin Meeth, supervisor of the recreation room, said that this number did not include all students using the tables but was a tabulation of the cards turned in for playing privileges. As the number neared 10,000, we decided it was a nice round figure at which to make an award. There was no advance planning or publicity given the matter.

Sponsor was the UC Music Committee.

By CHARLOTTE ANDERSON

As a result of the meetings held by Dr. Robert Decker, associate director of student personnel, and Robert Hess, manager, housing and food services, many problems concerning these areas have been and are being investigated. Some of the trouble has been alleviated, and an attempt has been made to give explanations about the others.

Of primary interest to the majority of the students are those problems concerning food service. Complaints about breakfast include: Shells in the eggs and excessive oil in the sausage—a new breakfast-cook has been employed and through this move this problem has been remedied. Black potatoes—apparently this is caused by submergence in the high mineral content water; alternate methods of steam cooking and frying will be tried.

Pancakes and Toast

Hard pancakes—It is almost impossible to serve light fluffy pancakes after they have been kept on the line more than five minutes. They have been temporarily discontinued until the problem of top heating and line lighting in the area can be solved. Toast—There have been some electrical difficulties with the large toaster, but it appears that this will be corrected in the near future, thus making the toast crispier. Hot chocolate will be available on the North line at breakfast as long as there is sufficient demand for it.

Answers are also being sought for problems concerning the other meals. Rolls will be kept in a moisture controlled bread warmer in an attempt to keep them from becoming hard. Food service bakes all of their own rolls with the exception of a particular kind of roll which is supposed to be hard. No day-old bread is used. However, some students prefer old bread or Monks bread.

A rotating selection of salad dressings will be on the condiment stand in the dining area. Also, more bottles of ketchup have been placed around the various dining areas.

It has been requested that scalloped frozen french fries be used. This type is considerably more expensive than those prepared by food services, but it is recognized that they are much better and they will be provided as frequently as possible. The lumpy mashed potatoes have been called to the attention of the appropriate people and are being remedied. The feasibility of pull-down type heat lamps over the hot foods on the line has been investigated. These and the use of draft-stopping plexiglass doors on the dumb waiter should insure that the food will be hot.

Snack Bar Menu

For those on the meal plan who have verifiable class schedules which preclude their eating in the regular cafeteria line, the following menu in the Snack Bar has been offered: choice of hamburger, cheeseburger, sandwich, or soup; combination salad; Jell-o; choice of ade drink, milk, or coffee; choice of pie, cake, or any of the other pastries on the line. No ice cream, cokes and other items not found on the cafeteria line are offered.

Solutions for many of the problems concerning the residence halls are also being sought. It has been determined that the sometimes disagreeable taste of the soft drinks in the vending machines is caused by the water. The vendor is investigating the use of special filters to try to solve this problem. The vendor has agreed to keep a larger quantity of drinks in the juice machine in Outer

Alpha as long as there is a sufficient demand.

Vending Machines

It was suggested that the coffee machines be moved to the first floor on the girls' side of Alpha Hall. This would require special water, electrical and drain outlets which are quite expensive. Further, it is believed that the machine would not get as much use if it were to be placed in a position so removed from the lobby. The vendor is going to provide plastic cup carriers so that one girl can easily carry coffee for several.

The sandwich machines have been checked and it has been found that there has been a surplus of sandwiches recently. As the demand increases, the inventory will be increased. A new machine will not be installed in the men's side for some time. It is being redesigned to make it more tamper-proof.

Lights and Dryers

Although it now appears that the cost would be prohibitive, the expense involved in putting additional lights over the showers is being investigated. Means of securing the clothes dryer doors more tightly are being sought. Also, different time controls might possibly be installed on the dryers which will provide additional drying time for the same amount of money.

Pay station telephone numbers will be listed in the next edition of the telephone directory. The petty cash fund at the main desk will be increased so that more change can be made.

Sometime in the near future beds in Outer Alpha will be removed, strengthened, and repaired.

Maids and Janitors

The maid and janitorial service has been discussed with the appropriate university department. All janitors have been cautioned to be certain to make their presence known before entering a hallway. Also, the maids have been cautioned about sitting around, at least where this can be observed by visitors.

Suggestions and complaints from the students concerning food and housing are encouraged. It is the desire of the housing department to make things as convenient and beneficial to the students as possible.
