DID YOU KNOW...

Compiled by the Florida Division of Cultural Affairs

Arts and culture organizations create $8 in revenue for the public sector for every $1 that federal, state, and local governments invest in arts and culture.

Students with an education rich in the arts have higher GPAs and standardized test scores, lower drop-out rates, and even better attitudes about community service...regardless of socio-economic status.

As of January 2012, Florida is home to 67,487 arts-related businesses that employ 217,406 people.

Studies have shown that engagement with the arts assists in preserving mental health. For instance, participation in dance programs has shown to slow the development of dementia by up to 75 percent.
