Join us for Librarians and Local Historians Day at the 2019 New England Regional Genealogical Conference. Our all-day professional development program will be held on April 3, 2019, in Manchester, NH. Highlights of the program include—From Simmons College to PBS, how I became a host on the Genealogy Roadshow, with D. Joshua Taylor, MA, MLS; FamilySearch.org Resources to Help Library Patrons with Cherie Bush, Deputy Chief Genealogical Officer for FamilySearch International; and AmericanAncestors.org for Public Libraries with Jean Maguire, NEHGS Library Director. $40 for the day, luncheon sponsored by ProQuest. See the full program brochure at: http://www.nergc.org/wp-content/uploads/2018/12/NERGC-2019.pdf.

We are particularly interested in hearing from libraries that have a genealogy club, host genealogy activities, or collaborate with their local historical society.

Hello,

I have a patron that has been trying to find someone who could transcribe her Yiddish and Polish old letters (1912-1920s). She is willing to pay someone. We have scanned them because they are in delicate condition. Does anyone have a contact? We have tried several local contacts and churches. Also, how much is a reasonable amount to pay someone per hour?

Thank you,

Hello again!

We are happy to offer these three titles of duplicate genealogy periodicals.

See the attached WORD document to determine which issues of each are available.

If you are interested in obtaining any of these periodicals for your library, please send an email directly to Bruce Rova at flrova at mchsi.com <mailto:flrova at mchsi.com> (NOT to the genealib address). By sending me an email listing the titles and which issues of the items you hope to obtain, you are agreeing that upon receipt of items you do receive, you will send a check or money order payable to "WFGS" to reimburse us for the amount of the "library-to-library media mail" postage cost. That also requires you send the name of your library and the package mailing address for your library in the email. I will reply to each request with info on which items will be coming and when they are shipped.

Upon receipt, please mail the postage cost reimbursement to:

WFGS

Warm regards from Pensacola,
Bruce Rova

Hi,

Since Cindy mentioned Gesher Galicia (and, I suspect, my friend Shelley!), I thought I'd chime in.

Two good sources of Yiddish translators (who presumably would also transcribe):

Yiddish Book Center
https://www.yiddishbookcenter.org/about/translators

YIVO
https://yivo.org/translators-list

This list includes Yiddish and Polish translators:
https://www.jewishgen.org/yizkor/yiztran.html
Good luck.

Is there a local Synagogue that could be contacted to see if there is someone there that could translate the letters?

A Jewish Genealogy Portal Facebook group. Folks post documents for transcribing.

Cara

Another group that you might contact for advice is Gesher Galicia, at https://www.geshergalicia.org/. A friend from our local genealogical society is very active in this group. While its geographic focus is narrow, it has many connections with other groups and individuals involved in Jewish genealogy.

Cindy in Maryland

I don't know of anyone personally, but if there's a university nearby you might ask them if you haven't already.
Hello,

I have a patron that has been trying to find someone who could transcribe her Yiddish and Polish old letters (1912-1920s). She is willing to pay someone. We have scanned them because they are in delicate condition. Does anyone have a contact?

We have tried several local contacts and churches. Also, how much is a reasonable amount to pay someone per hour?

Thank you,

[The Meaning of Freedom in an Era of Enslavement]
THE MEANING OF FREEDOM IN AN ERA OF ENSLAVEMENT

Stories of freedom often emphasize the accounts of daring runaways, yet another process provided a path out of slavery. The acquisition of freedom papers through manumission required community support and a keen understanding of the prevailing legal, social and economic constraints. Yet finalizing this process also required difficult choices between family, freedom, and potential re-enslavement.

Dr. Sheri Huerta, History Professor at George Mason University, will explore the complexities of manumission and the reality of being "free" for black families across northern Virginia. Come and join the conversation about the meanings of freedom and the many factors that affected the decision to seek freedom or remain enslaved.

Discovering African-American family history prior to 1865 can be difficult. There are special challenges to finding documentation during the age of slavery. RELIC's Don Wilson will identify sources that can be used to trace lives and relationships and demonstrate the process through a case study approach.

Hi all,

Do any of you hold collections for other organizations on a long-term, but not permanent basis? In addition to my day job, I'm the librarian/archivist for a local genealogical society. Our society doesn't have a brick and mortar home, but we do have a burgeoning collection (currently stored in my dining room) that we would like to house at a local institution. My question is that if you are a repository holding a similar collection, do you have a written agreement with the organization? Would you feel comfortable sending me a copy?

Many thanks in advance.

Danny

We hold the archives of many genealogical societies. They are the archives, not the working papers of the organizations. We have letters of agreement when the societies have given the archives to the Denver Public Library. They then become the property of the Library. Every few years they add to the collections.

I have been retired for 10 years and no longer have access to the original documents. Having said that, the library where I worked held a large portion of the collection of the main local historical society for over 80 years. There must have been some written agreement, but I could never find anything more than a short summary of what was held in what dept of the library.

The library did not make a note in the cataloging of the items, that they belonged to the society (for those of you who are catalogers, it would have been a 966 in the MARC schema). When the the society decided to repatriate their items each and every item in the collections had to be handled and inspected for their markings. And after all of that they have fallen on hard times and nearly everything is not easily available.

Lesson = have a written agreement, have a great listing of the items, and if they are cataloged make sure that a machine search can easily find them.

Nuff said.

Hi again all,

I'd like to thank everyone for their suggestions. I'd just like to clarify that I'm not looking for an agreement that would transfer ownership (i.e., deeds of gift), but rather an agreement that the Society would retain ownership of the collection while it is being held for preservation and public access by the library.

Thanks again!

Danny

When the the society decided to repatriate their items each and every item in the collections had to be handled and inspected for their markings. And after all of that they have fallen on hard times and nearly everything is not easily available.

Lesson = have a written agreement, have a great listing of the items, and if they are cataloged make sure that a machine search can easily find them. Nuff said.

Hi all,

Do any of you hold collections for other organizations on a long-term, but not permanent basis? In addition to my day job, I’m the librarian/archivist for a local genealogical society. Our society doesn’t have a brick and mortar home, but we do have a burgeoning collection (currently stored in my dining room) that we would like to house at a local institution. My question is that if you are a repository holding a similar collection, do you have a written agreement with the organization? Would you feel comfortable sending me a copy?

Many thanks in advance.

Look at the last picture in the article. Even in a state-of-the-art facility ... old school still has a place. :-) Long reign the card catalog.

Hello;

I was talking to a patron today who lamented that Ancestry Library Edition is no longer available from home. I was here when we got the database, but I don't remember it ever having remote access. It's been bugging me ever since, because now I'm curious! Is my memory failing me, or is she thinking of some other database?

Thanks,
Kim

I agree with Susan - ALE has never been available by remote access - only onsite at a library.

I, too, don't think it was ever available otherwise. Is it possible that

Is she possibly thinking of a site like Heritage Quest? Many libraries provide access through their library card for patrons. Agree with others, ALE was never available remotely to my knowledge.

I believe the very first year when it came out, it was a Gale product then, I think, was not yet ProQuest, that it had remote access. It also has a slightly different name. My system didn't have it yet. It was my understanding, and this could be urban genealogy myth, that a patron somewhere like Wisconsin or Minnesota shared their library card number on a listserv. This upset Ancestry and remote was shut down. :) I think this was around 2002. Pretty sure there was discussion here about that. But, have not searched. Don't know where else I would have gotten it, well m, maybe from our Gale rep or in History Section at ALA.

Now, this may not be what that patron was thinking of, but this is my remembrance.

Interesting. I don't know long ALE was available before we subscribed, but the patron has always been in this area I think, so she wouldn't have used it anywhere else. I asked her if she was confusing it with HeritageQuest, since we also subscribe to that...but she said she was sure it was Ancestry!

Years ago Ancestry Library Edition did have remote access. We first had a subscription and then the State Library bought a subscription for all the libraries in the State. There was remote access and people had to log on using their Michigan library card or Michigan drivers' license. However, the genealogists misused this privilege and people gave their drivers license numbers to people in other states so they too could logon and use the ancestry database for free.

When the folks at ancestry.com found out this was happening, they stopped the remote access so that users now have to logon at a computer in a library. So genealogists have only themselves to blame that there is no remote access.

Our library stores records for the local genealogy group. We do not have a written agreement. It is not a permanent arrangement ad if we run out of room for things, we have the group take them back.

Hi - a former Ancestry employee here (1999-2008) who worked on the Ancestry Library Edition...  The Ancestry Library Edition was initially resold by Gale - this was from about 1998 to 2003. In about the 2003 timeframe the product was transitioned to be resold by ProQuest. I do believe that for some time during the product's tenure with Gale that remote access was indeed offered. But remote access was shut down - around 2000 - 2002 (as has been alluded to in this discussion) due to some concerns about abuse of the remote access. ProQuest has never offered the Ancestry Library Edition with remote access -- to my knowledge. HeritageQuest has been offered (since its beginning) with remote access - but this product is pretty old and hasn't had much if anything added to you (at least the time I checked it). The MyHeritage Library Edition (resold by EBSCO) does support remote access and has since EBSCO launched the product with MyHeritage in 2013. Full disclosure - I am now an employee of MyHeritage.

It has always been my understanding that this database has never offered remote access. In fact, I went to a demo at a library conference a few years ago and the person from the company said they did not offer remote access.

I concur with Mike Mansfield. When I came back to the genealogy dept in 2003, ALE was only available in house. ProQuest was and remains accessible remotely. Based on a recent phone conversation directly with Ancestry they do offer remote access to a limited sub set of each state's collection on Ancestry, if one logs in via a state in our case) archives web site log in. I emphasize that it is a limited set of databases.

It is my understanding that member of the LDS church do get remote access but only to the limited library/institutional version which is accessible at the the Family History Centers.

About a decade ago, Ancestry offered a remote access option to public libraries. At the time, my library budget could not accommodate the fee for this service. If your organization had one of these remote access agreements, it may have been changed in a new agreement since that time.

At one point, we had remote access at our library, but we lost it in the next fiscal year when Ancestry noticed we had too many people accessing the database from home, so they pulled our remote access agreement.

Sent from my phone, in case lots of "typos". Well, that is the story I am sticking to.

Hello;

I was talking to a patron today who lamented that Ancestry Library Edition is no longer available from home. I was here when we got the database, but I don't remember it ever having remote access. It's been bugging me ever since, because now I'm curious! Is my memory failing me, or is she thinking of some other database?

Thanks,
Kim

The book donations are so piled in my office that I can't walk around anymore, so it's time for some pre-Spring cleaning.

I have a few titles this afternoon that I can send for the price of postage (library or media rates).

1. A Directory of Cemeteries in Waller County (Texas), 1992 reprint, paperback, ~170 pages

2. Family and Landscape: Deerfield Homelots from 1671 (Massachusetts) by Susan McGowan and Amelia Miller, 1996, paperback, ~225 pages

7. Seventeenth Century Isle of Wight County, Virginia by Boddie, hardback, 1959, underlining and marking throughout. Inscribed by author.

Stay tuned for more in the (hopefully) not-too-distant future.
