EXPLORE RELIC
May 2019 - The Ruth E. Lloyd Information Center for Genealogy and Local History (RELIC)

Start your historical journey here. RELIC's email newsletter highlights upcoming free events and happenings. Genealogy and local Virginia history are our specialty as a service provided by the Prince William Public Library. We're located at Bull Run Regional Library and you can always find more about us at pwcgov.org/relic

RELIC's Don Wilson will describe how a growing number of newspapers online may be searched for items useful for family and local history. Now you can find obituaries, marriage notices, court cases, advertisements, news items, local gossip, and photos - anything that might appear between the pages of the hometown gazette.

GRAFFITI HOUSES: THE CIVIL WAR FROM THE PERSPECTIVE OF INDIVIDUAL SOLDIERS

Dr. Stephen Robertson, Professor and Director of the Roy Rosenzweig Center for History & New Media at George Mason University, will present a program on the "graffiti houses" of Northern Virginia, including Prince William's Ben Lomond. With the evacuation of the Confederate Army from Manassas, federal forces occupied the area by the spring of 1862. The plaster walls of Ben Lomond were soon covered in graffiti from floor to ceiling. Historically, graffiti has led to an understanding of the lifestyle and language of both ancient and modern cultures.

A MYSTERIOUS GRAVE

Some of the questions that RELIC gets provide new insights into the history of Prince William County. Recently, we were asked to find biographical information about a Union soldier of the Civil War who is buried in Prince William County. Daniel H. Magee has a military grave marker at Belle Haven Baptist Church Cemetery at Kopp, now on the Quantico Marine Corps Base. He is one of only two Union soldiers at Belle Haven.

The federal order for his grave marker shows Magee was a member of Company I, 51st Pennsylvania Infantry, and that he died 22 December 1897. It does not say where he was from in Pennsylvania. The American Civil War Research Database identifies his residence as Bradford County, and his dates of enlistment and discharge (October 1864 and July 1865). The index to Union pension applications shows he was given an invalid's pension in 1870, and his widow Addie applied for a pension soon after his death. U.S. census records show he was living in Bradford County in 1870, 1880, and 1890 (veteran's schedule), and his widow was there in 1900. She died in 1940 and is buried in Bradford County.
The reason Daniel is buried in Prince William County is a mystery. In fact, there are two records of his burial on FindaGrave.com: a second entry, based on some sort of tradition, is that he is buried in the Silvara Cemetery in Bradford County, although there is no marker there.

The reason we were asked about Mr. Magee is because he and the other Union soldier, Thomas Woolfenden Sr. (1843-1926), will be honored by the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War in a dedication ceremony on May 4. Woolfenden, a native of Catonsville, Maryland, was a member of Company C, 8th Maryland Infantry.

Descendant R. C. Woolfenden reports: "Thomas befriended the family that owned the land that is part of the R-14 training area aboard the base during the winter of 1863-64, while the Union army was wintering in Northern Virginia. When they placed the farm up for sale in the 1870s, he purchased it [1876]. He moved his family to the farm from their home in Baltimore in 1885." He and his wife Isabelle donated land for the church and cemetery.

Members of the Woolfenden family have been closely associated with Belle Haven for well over a century. If Daniel Magee has descendants, they have not yet been identified. His connection to Belle Haven is an ongoing mystery.

When Alexandria, Virginia became Union territory shortly after the start of the Civil War, escaped slaves known as contrabands, began to flee to the city from all over Virginia. This refugee crisis eventually led to overcrowded conditions and high mortality rates for those seeking freedom and protection from their former masters. More than 1,700 contrabands died between 1864 and 1868. They were buried on the southern edge of Alexandria in a cemetery that was largely forgotten until it was rediscovered in 1996. Please join us as author and genealogist, Char
McCargo-Bah, presents her newest book, Alexandria's Freedmen's Cemetery: A Legacy of Freedom, which examines the struggles of these men and women and the search for their descendants. Copies of the book will be available for purchase.

USING U.S. LAND RECORDS TO SOLVE FAMILY HISTORY PUZZLES

Land records contain a wealth of genealogical, historical, and legal information. Depending upon the type and time period, they may offer new insights about your ancestors and family history. In addition to providing location and date of settlement, records may attest to one's age, place of birth, citizenship, military service, literacy, and economic status. They may even include similar details about other family members and lead you to other genealogical records. RELIC's Darlene Hunter, Certified Genealogist (CG), will provide examples of various land records and explain how to locate them.

Our genealogy society purchased state census microfilm years ago but now because of space we need to find another home for them or dump them. We also have microfilm cabinets available.

Any suggestions?

On both staff and public computers at my library, we're finding that a search started in Ancestry Library Edition often returns results in Ancestry.com. If a patron then tries to see one of the hits, such as a census page, they're asked to sign up for Ancestry.com. This used to happen occasionally, but today it's happening with every search I try. Is this happening for anyone else?

Yes, we've experienced both issues. The Ancestry.com site coming up to ask patrons to pay and when you click on "all results" it goes back to the home page. Very frustrating. I've contacted them as well and got the same response. I'm really beginning to wonder why it hasn't or can't be fixed yet.

We've also had an issue on when a patron wants to print an image or picture and an error page comes up. It's one of our regular ALE users and he has to click the back button at least 2 times to get back to the image or record and then he can print. I wasn't sure if this was an issue within our library or an ALE issue. I submitted a ticket to our IT person to figure that out.

Thanks!

I've had a different problem with ALE. When I try to go back to "all results", it switches to the home page. Has anyone experience that??

On both staff and public computers at my library, we're finding that a search started in Ancestry Library Edition often returns results in Ancestry.com. If a patron then tries to see one of the hits, such as a census page, they're asked to sign up for Ancestry.com. This used to happen occasionally, but today it's happening with every search I try. Is this happening for anyone else?

Ancestry is more interested in DNA sales; they haven't added much in the way of new records.

Message-ID: <CANue--UoY6WeCpt9JXFN=wMn+JrKaX1L+WyuyqL0ggNZPVkbq@mail.gmail.com>

Our collection is housed in two adjoining rooms. The hours for this room are shorter on most days than the rest of the library. We are trying to decide whether to allow books, journals, and/or microfilm to go to the adult reference area when this room is closed. Management would like to know if other libraries allow their resources to go to elsewhere in the library? Are there some items you allow to be used elsewhere and some that you do not?

Thank you.

No books or microfilm are allowed to leave our room and our hours are shorter than the rest of the library. However if we have duplicate books then we do have a section, still within the genealogy room, where the duplicates are shelved and these books may be checked out just like regular library books.

We are not a lending library. There are two meeting rooms and a small room for California genealogy books and periodicals which can be taken to the study area. Our stacks contain books, periodicals and family histories. Everything in our library is on WorldCat.

Since our collection is in a separate room with a study area and copy machine, everything must stay in the room. The only exception is if the copy machine is down, then people may take what they wish to copy into the main library to use the copy machine there then bring them right back. That machine is within eyesight of our room and we have glass walls. Our room is open all library hours.

When I was still working, we started by having a small room, and having to lock everything up in cabinets, then lock the room, and then lock the library. As the building grew we eventually had the whole second floor of a city block sized building. However there was only ever one person on duty at any given time. Trying to keep track of who had what where over acreage that size was a thankless task at times. Then there was the fact that there were 7 different storage areas on three different floors.

All this to say even though nothing was ever allowed to leave, we noticed "shrinkage" over the years. For collection integrity and safety I would not advise things to be taken elsewhere.

Just my two cents.

Fairfax County Public Library's Virginia Room has more books to trade. This list is just Virginia. Please respond to our volunteer, Fran, at Bfm1010 at cox.net and Frances.Millhouser2 at fairfaxcounty.gov.

Fran will be out of town until after May 15th, but she'll respond to your requests then, in the order in which they were received.

Be sure to include your mailing address in your email so that we can make your mailing label. There's a Word and a pdf version of the list, so I hope everyone will be able to open them. Apologies for sending attachments, but the county won't allow us to use file sharing services.

If you don't have anything to trade, please send a check for postage reimbursement (made out to Fairfax County Public Library) to

Laura Wickstead
Virginia Room
10360 North St.
Fairfax, VA 22030

Trades are allotted on a first-come, first-served basis. The volunteer will email you to tell you that the box has been sent to our mail room, and she'll include a list of which titles are in the box.
Since we have a separate room with computers, microfilm readers and copiers, we do not let our materials leave the room. We do have a small section of Genealogy Circulating Books and they are the only ones that do leave the department.

On both staff and public computers at my library, we're finding that a search started in Ancestry Library Edition often returns results in Ancestry.com. If a patron then tries to see one of the hits, such as a census page, they're asked to sign up for Ancestry.com. This used to happen occasionally, but today it's happening with every search I try. Is this happening for anyone else?

Subject: [Genealib] Do you allow genealogical/historical materials to leave for another part of the library?

Our collection is housed in two adjoining rooms. The hours for this room are shorter on most days than the rest of the library. We are trying to decide whether to allow books, journals, and/or microfilm to go to the adult reference area when this room is closed. Management would like to know if other libraries allow their resources to go to elsewhere in the library? Are there some items you allow to be used elsewhere and some that you do not?

Thank you.

No books or microfilm are allowed to leave our room and our hours are shorter than the rest of the library. However if we have duplicate books then we do have a section, still within the genealogy room, where the duplicates are shelved and these books may be checked out just like regular library books.

We are not a lending library. There are two meeting rooms and a small room for California genealogy books and periodicals which can be taken to the study area. Our stacks contain books, periodicals and family histories. Everything in our library is on WorldCat.

Since our collection is in a separate room with a study area and copy machine, everything must stay in the room. The only exception is if the copy machine is down, then people may take what they wish to copy into the main library to use the copy machine there then bring them right back. That machine is within eyesight of our room and we have glass walls. Our room is open all library hours.

When I was still working, we started by having a small room, and having to lock everything up in cabinets, then lock the room, and then lock the library. As the building grew we eventually had the whole second floor of a city block sized building. However there was only ever one person on duty at any given time. Trying to keep track of who had what where over acreage that size was a thankless task at times. Then there was the fact that there were 7 different storage areas on three different floors.

All this to say even though nothing was ever allowed to leave, we noticed "shrinkage" over the years. For collection integrity and safety I would not advise things to be taken elsewhere.

Just my two cents.

Fairfax County Public Library's Virginia Room has more books to trade. This list is just Virginia. Please respond to our volunteer, Fran, at Bfm1010@cox.net and Frances.Millhouser2@fairfaxcounty.gov.

Fran will be out of town until after May 15th, but she'll respond to your requests then, in the order in which they were received.

Be sure to include your mailing address in your email so that we can make your mailing label. There's a Word and a pdf version of the list, so I hope everyone will be able to open them. Apologies for sending attachments, but the county won't allow us to use file sharing services.

If you don't have anything to trade, please send a check for postage reimbursement (made out to Fairfax County Public Library) to

Laura Wickstead
Virginia Room
10360 North St.
Fairfax, VA 22030

Trades are allotted on a first-come, first-served basis. The volunteer will email you to tell you that the box has been sent to our mail room, and she'll include a list of which titles are in the box.
We consider our materials to be part of the Reference collection, and they do not circulate. On occasion a member of the administration will ask if they may use an item for a specific purpose, and we generally grant them permission. Customers wishing to view manuscript materials are advised to call ahead for an appointment, and they are required to sign the materials out and view them in the department.

When I was working we had a "special loan" form which we used when, say a newspaper or a community group (like a Landmark Society) wanted to take something for a discrete amount of time. It was never used for regular patrons. If they wanted/needed a copy of something we could scan it for them. I think that is what my old place does now, is do scans on a regular basis.

We have both reference and circulating books in the Genealogy Room. Nobody ever asks to take reference books out of the room because we have a copier in here, and that's why most people would want to take them out. We have only three manuscript collections consisting of local material which will not be allowed out; one of them contains diaries which we are transcribing and putting into the reference collection for everyday use.

We have a large local history room, with a good deal of archival storage elsewhere in our library. The photocopy machine is just outside of the local history room, and patrons are allowed to bring books out for copying. Inside the room, there is a scanner available.

For decades, we had a strict policy that no genealogy or local history materials were to leave the library. But about 10 years ago, we decided to experiment with offering a circulating collection.

The circulating items are displayed on a separate group of shelves; and the call number labels are yellow, to help keep them separate from the in-house books. With the exception of some how-to genealogy books (many of which were diverted from our general adult nonfiction collection), most of the circulating books are second or third copies of pertinent titles.

Unlike our regular materials, which circulate for 4 weeks, the genealogy books go out for two. Our patrons seem to appreciate the privilege of borrowing these books, and almost always return them promptly.

Since starting the circulating collection, we have had only one "lost" book, and the patron immediately paid for a replacement copy. We have been pleased with the success of this system.

Here in Sarasota County FL we have 2 libraries with good size genealogy collections and we send items to each other for in-library use only usually for 2 weeks. Our main library has a circulating genealogy collection adjacent to the regular genealogy books and people borrow from it all the time and like it very much. Our collection in Venice has a few books that circulate within our regular non-fiction collection. Those are mostly genealogy how-to books. We don't really have space in our genealogy area for a large circulating collection and we don't have that many second copies.

The circulating items are displayed on a separate group of shelves; and the call number labels are yellow, to help keep them separate from the in-house books. With the exception of some how-to genealogy books (many of which were diverted from our general adult nonfiction collection), most of the circulating books are second or third copies of pertinent titles.

Unlike our regular materials, which circulate for 4 weeks, the genealogy books go out for two. Our patrons seem to appreciate the privilege of borrowing these books, and almost always return them promptly.

Since starting the circulating collection, we have had only one "lost" book, and the patron immediately paid for a replacement copy. We have been pleased with the success of this system.

For a couple of years, we did have shorter hours in the SC Room. If anyone was looking at materials, I allowed the materials to be taken to the tables near Reference. The patrons would turn in the materials to the Reference personnel who would place the items on an SC cart. I also took the most common reference materials (12-14 items) on a cart and wheeled it to Reference in case it was needed. My staff would get the cart in the morning.

Microfilm was not taken from the room. Patrons would need to make arrangements for when the room was staffed. Since we also have a circulating collection in the SC Room, if a patron needed a circ copy, the Reference staff would grab the room key and retrieve the books.

Currently, there is only ? hour on Saturday in which we do not have the same library hours.

Sincerely,

Our collection is housed in two adjoining rooms. The hours for this room are shorter on most days than the rest of the library. We are trying to decide whether to allow books, journals, and/or microfilm to go to the adult reference area when this room is closed. Management would like to know if other libraries allow their resources to go to elsewhere in the library? Are there some items you allow to be used elsewhere and some that you do not?

Thank you.

Microfilm and archival materials don't leave our division, but books are becoming another story.

We're increasingly concerned about lack of use of our book collection and wonder about the future of print genealogical materials. Despite everything we say to our patrons about not everything being online and to do thorough research, you have to consult some books, we're disheartened by the empty public research space we see daily from our reference desks.
Over the past 18 months we've been keeping track of in-house book use. We haven't crunched the numbers yet. Maybe things are being used more than we realize. But we're slowly beginning an experiment to make more of our genealogy book collection circulating, and this includes state consortium and traditional interlibrary loan use if requested. The types of materials I'm considering are duplicate copies, narrative histories, reprints of out-of-copyright works, and books from the few remaining genealogical publishers that can currently be replaced. Hard-to-find books of transcribed records will remain non-circulating.

It's a case-by-case basis, but I feel we need to yield a bit. Too many people just do not want to come to us in person. So if they won't come to us, we're going to try letting a little bit of us go to them. It may be a losing battle, but it will be interesting to see the outcome.

There was one library I visited in southern Michigan that made you leave your drivers license with them while you used their materials. Then you were allowed to bring up to 5 items at a time out to the reference area. The main reason they did that, I think, was that they didn't have a copier (or staff) in their little history room/closet.

Interesting idea about having a mixed circulation collection - you'll have to keep us informed as to how that works for you.

As of now, my collection doesn't circulate. But, we do have some how-tos out in the regular non-fiction that do.

If you have good genealogical material it is best not to circulate it but make it easily available for any researcher to use it. Set up some simple guidelines and see what happens, you can always add or subtract to them as you size up your audience.

Perhaps of interest for you, your colleagues, or your patrons.
Featuring Tina Beaird, MLIS, the Abrams Foundation Family History Seminar will be held in Lansing on July 12-13. Brought to you by the Archives of Michigan and the Michigan Genealogical Council, the event's information, program schedule, and registration page can all be found here: https://seekingmichigan.org/events/2019-abrams-foundation-family-history-seminar.

With a terrific lineup of programs and speakers, we are looking forward to a fantastic event.

The Midwestern Roots conference will be held just down the road in Indianapolis the following week, so all the more reason to come to Michigan in July! Please feel free to email me off-list with any questions about the event. Thank you.

I'm preparing a list of equipment and software for an oral history setup. It will need to be portable since we don't have a dedicated space available. I'd appreciate the input of anyone who has done this.

1. Laptop PC
2. external microphone - thinking a Yeti (do I need the Yeti Pro?)
3. headphone (so can listen while recording and adjust input as needed)
   - do I need anything very fancy or will any ear-covering headphones work?

Recording software options

- Audacity software (free) - for use during recording, editing
- or do I need something different? perhaps iZotope Nectar Elements

Transcription software options (so we don't have to do as much typing)

- Dragon Naturally Speaking - not designed for multiple speakers
- Amazon Transcribe - appears promising ($0.024/min but may have extra charges) - https://aws.amazon.com/transcribe/?nc2=type_a
- Scribie Audio - automatic transcription - also reasonable price-wise ($0.10/min) - https://scribie.com/transcription/pricing

Fairfax County Public Library's Virginia Room has more books to trade. Please respond to our volunteer, Fran, at Bfm1010 at cox.net and Frances.Millhouser2 at fairfaxcounty.gov.

Be sure to include your mailing address in your email so that we can make your mailing label. There's a Word and a pdf version of the list, so I hope everyone will be able to open them. Apologies for sending attachments, but the county won't allow us to use file sharing services.

If you don't have anything to trade, please send a check for postage reimbursement (made out to Fairfax County Public Library) to

Laura Wickstead
Virginia Room
10360 North St.
Fairfax, VA 22030

Trades are allotted on a first-come, first-served basis. The volunteer will email you to tell you that the box has been sent to our mail room, and she'll include a list of which titles are in the box.

Elaine (McHale) McRey
Librarian
Fairfax County (VA) Public Library
