

'burg Blogs » Portfolio Anxiety?

Posted January 28, 2013 at 3:53 pm by Jocelyn Hall '15

As the Spring Semester is in full swing, so it is time to apply for the Graphic Design program. Portfolios are due February 1st, and I worry that my work will not be sufficient to make it in.

This will likely be a fantastic opportunity whether I am accepted or not; however, I would certainly prefer to be in than out.

If I do not “make the cut”, theoretically I will have more time to better hone my skills and improve upon the areas I am lacking in.

Until now, I have tried not to worry about whether I have a good chance to get in the program, but as the due date approaches, I’m getting more anxious. I tend to try to focus on improving.

Someone once said “Always strive to improve.” This is often a motivating factor for me.

Ink drawing and edit

Charcoal drawing for portfolio

About the blogger

I'm a student in the Honors program. I'm also one of the younger bloggers, an opinionated and sarcastic sophomore who is more interested in food (at times) than my studies for pre-majoring in Graphic Design. A mocha frappuccino and hair dyeing addict, it's a rare occurrence to see me with a solid natural color.