Artist Comes To Town For Art Exhibit

Samuel Brown

TAMPA — Samuel Brown was on hand last week at the Museum of African-American Art in Tampa for the "Living Legends" exhibit, which displays his work and the work of the two other oldest African-American artists. The other two artists are Huey Lee Smith and Louis Mailou Jones.

Brown was born in Wilmington, NC on April 16, 1907. In 1910, his family relocated to Philadelphia where he attended local schools and the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Art (now Philadelphia College of Art) where he specialized and graduated with a degree in art education.

During the Depression, Brown was one of the few fortunate African-American artists appointed to the Public Works of Art Project (WPA), directed by Fiske Kimball, the director of the Pennsylvania Museum of Art.

In 1938, Brown began his 35-year career in education at Bok Voca-

The Vanishing African-American Teacher: Part II

by I.W. Williams

In Part I in this series, I shared with you some startling statistics about the small percentage of black teachers in the Pinellas County school system. In the interim, questions have been asked, "What about black administrators? Are the percentages higher or lower in the administrative system?" Well, guess what? The percentages are higher. Let's take a look at the administrative picture:

Elementary School System

White Females	White Males	Black Females	Black Males	Percentage of Blacks
45	45	10	2	10.52

Middle School System

White Females	White Males	Black Females	Black Males	Percentage of Blacks
17	30	3	5	14.28

High School System

White Females	White Males	Black Females	Black Males	Percentage of Blacks
25	50	9	7	17.58

Vocational System

White Females	White Males	Black Females	Black Males	Percentage of Blacks
0	7	1	2	30.00

Others

White Females	White Males	Black Females	Black Males	Percentage of Blacks
73	65	2	7	6.00

Interestingly, there are 25 black male and 25 black female administrators out of a total of some 406 personnel. Note the contrast: African Americans constitute 11.21 percent of the administrative staff and only 8.28 percent of the teaching staff.

In my last article, I mentioned some of the reasons for the decline in black teachers in our system. What effect or impact will this decline in black teachers have on our school system? This article will focus on this question.

First and foremost, I foresee a worsening plight for our African-American students. The pace of black suspensions will accelerate. More and more will be shunted off into special education programs. (Isn't it ironic that when we look back into history — pre-desegregation — there were not any special education schools.) I expect our white teachers will become less and less tolerant of young black male students. The net effect will be more and more young black male students dropping out of school and entering a life of criminal misconduct.

Over the years, our black teachers have had to be fathers and mothers to our children, as well as positive role models. Alas, as a result of the declining black teachers' base, other problems will come to the front: (1) less emphasis on black heritage and culture; (2) a more hostile environment; (3) more and more emphasis on private schools to the detriment of our public school system.

What will the future bring? What can we do? These and other questions will be looked at in my next article on "Vanishing African-American Teachers," which will be after the elections.

Next week in my Politics '92 column, I will bring you my final analysis on the presidential race and my recommendations for your consideration.

CORRECTION

Through inadvertence, The Weekly Challenger omitted the high school statistics in Williams' article on "The Vanishing African-American Teacher: Part I" in the Oct. 17, 1992 edition. To correct the oversight, a full reprint of all of the statistics may be found in page 3 of this edition. The management regrets any inconvenience to our readers as a result of the omission.

Christine Bell, Belle Of Fashion

by Frances N. Pinckney

ST. PETERSBURG — She remembers making The Weekly Challenger's and Martin Rainey's 10 Best Dressed list some years ago. She made her own clothes then and she makes them now — sensationally stylish and sassy!

Christine Bell, fashion designer/interior decorator, has been in the fashion business in this city for about 30 years. She took some time out and worked a bit for others, but just isn't very good working for other people, so she is opening shop again at the House of Fashion, 895 22nd Avenue S, Suite 429, St. Petersburg.

Bell always had a creative mind when it came to sewing and making things. She designed and made her doll clothes, a colorful and petite wardrobe for her Barbie doll. She made a knockout wardrobe for herself when she was in high school and was recognized as the fashionplate of the school. Bell had a knack for just picking up a magazine, choosing an outfit that she liked and making it to perfection without a pattern.

She enrolled in a sewing class at Gibbs to get a seamstress license and was given an assignment to make a dress. Of course, the teacher expected to help her step by step with this project, but Bell had put the dress together, zipper and all, when the teacher came to get her started. "Why are you here?" the teacher asked. "You know how to sew, you just need to apply for your license."

Bell used to do fashion shows with the flamboy-

One Pediatrician's View

ST. PETERSBURG — Dr. Flora Robinson, MD, senior pediatrics physician at the Johnnie Ruth Clarke Health Center for two years, discusses her thoughts on the most important aspects of health care for children.

"My perspective is that of an ambulatory care pediatrician in a neighborhood clinic," Dr. Robinson says.

Many patients come to the center for day-to-day health concerns: immunizations, school physicals, medical complaints not requiring emergency room intervention, as well as patients with advanced illness or emergent problems who have been hesitant to approach the health care system because they have no insurance.

A Last Chance Beacon Of Hope For Troubled Youth

They said it couldn't be done. They said you couldn't put the toughest, hardest-to-reach students into a school and turn them into educated, employable young adults.

Dr. Bert L'Homme is happy to prove them wrong. As the executive director of City Lights School in Washington, DC, he and his dedicated staff of 25 prove every day that the right combination of love, nurturing, discipline and committed caring can turn dead-end youth into productive citizens.

City Lights School serves the District of Columbia youth that the educational system can't reach, the judicial system can't reform and the mental health system can't cure. Founded under the auspices of the Children's Defense Fund in 1982, this wonderfully innovative program has helped over 850 hard-core dropouts, juvenile delinquents, teen parents and emotionally disturbed youths turn their lives around.

Today, City Lights School has 87 students, mostly African American, ranging in age from 12 to 22. Dr. L'Homme describes a typical student as "a disadvantaged 16 year old who has at least one charge of delinquency, reads at the third grade level and suffers from emotional problems. Many of the students already have long careers as hard-core truants and most have been either physically or sexually abused." About one-third of the students are young women, most of whom are either pregnant or have a child when they enroll at City Lights. These are the young people behind the statistics and stories we see and hear on the news each day. They have dozens of strikes against them and they come to City Lights School knowing it's their last chance.

What they get at City Lights is a unique blend of counseling, self-esteem building, family values and career preparation. The school's programs are designed to enable students to find employment and live independently. A computer-based curriculum allows students to learn at their own pace. A comprehensive range of clinical services including individual therapy, crisis intervention and family counseling, help the youth develop coping skills.

An extensive substance abuse prevention program provides positive alternatives to the drug culture that beckons from the streets. Career counseling, pre-vocational training, independent living classes and job placement services help students move from school to the workplace. Perhaps most importantly, City Lights stresses the rebuilding of values that have traditionally strengthened the black community: hard work, respect for elders and the belief that we can overcome adversity to achieve.

The seven principles of Kwanzaa: unity, hard work, determination, creativity, cooperative economics, faith and collective work and responsibility, are emphasized and demonstrated daily. Best of all, City Lights has "grandparents" in every classroom and throughout the staff. Through the foster grandparent and retired seniors volunteer programs, the young people have constant contact with elders who offer them the special love, wisdom and guidance they so desperately need. Dr. L'Homme explains that "Grandma Washington and Grandpa Brown can often reach the students when no one else can."

City Lights School has recently moved into a newly renovated facility, the former St. Martin's School in northeast Washington. The building will enable City Lights to expand and serve more of the District's neediest youth. Soon, the school plans to add a day-care program, an in-house health clinic, an expanded vocational program and an after-school care program for neighborhood youths.

While all those things are nice, what's at the heart of City Lights' success is the human factor. "Even with all the technology and sophisticated theory, it's our relationships we're able to build with the kids that make the difference," Dr. L'Homme reminds us. They're recycling what society sees as throw-away kids into valuable and valued citizens of our community. They're a model for the kind of schools we need in every part of our country. Congratulations on a great 10 years, City Lights! May your beacon continue to shine.

For more information on the school, write to City Lights School, 62 T Street NE, Washington, DC 20002.

NABO Faces Monumental Problems

by Benjamin Hooks, NAACP Executive Director

The National Association of Black Organizers (NABO), a consortium of 100 representatives of black national organizations, holds its first summit meeting Nov. 13-14 at the Howard Inn in Washington, DC. The problems facing it are enormous.

It can't be stressed too strongly that if black America is ever going to confront and solve some of the many and mammoth problems it has been facing for more than 129 years, it must come together to organize and empower black America to save itself.

There are many splendid black civil rights and community groups as well as fraternal and religious organizations doing yeoman work in the black communities across our land. And despite formidable obstacles, many have achieved remarkable successes.

Despite these significant achievements, however, the thorny problems that go to the very core of our existence stubbornly remain, and in remaining, reveal the inherent weakness of our heroic individual but nevertheless futile struggle to overcome and prevail.

In my farewell address to the 83rd NAACP national convention, I said: "In 1990, your NAACP, cognizant of the need to form an organization of organizations pulled together a meeting of 100 representatives of black organizations to form the National Association of Black Organizers. The formulation of this concept came from a devoted NAACP'er, Horace Sheffield Jr., and would not have been successfully completed without the splendid support of NAACP chair William F. Gibson and then president Hazel N. Dukes. I am grateful for their support in helping pull this organization together."

The formation of NABO was officially proclaimed on Aug. 19, 1990 at the historic Washington, DC, NAACP convened summit conference of major black organizations at the Howard University-owned Howard Inn.

At that time I said, "We've come together to search for solutions and salvation, conscious that our survival as a people is at stake. We've come together to meet the crisis of our times. The NAACP is not ashamed, nor are we chagrined that we issued the call for this summit conference of black organizations. We know that we could not do the job by ourselves.

"We are the nation's largest, oldest, most effective, most prestigious, most loved, most hated, most cussed and most discussed civil rights organization. Big and bad as we are, we cannot grapple with these problems alone. We need the help of all of us. And, therefore, we've come to surrender openly and ask you to surrender too and together bend our wills to build an organization that can grapple with the problems of our times."

It is tantamount to black Americans proclaiming their own second Emancipation Proclamation. It is the second Emancipation Proclamation precisely because it recognized that a divided black America has spent 129 years in constant struggle for full citizenship. Divided, it was always doomed to lose.

As Ebony's esteemed executive editor Lerone Bennett Jr. said, "We've got to mobilize black America in a new perspective of operational unity. We are under siege in this country. We are threatened at the inter zones of our spirit and we have a right, a duty, to ask every man, woman and child to either lead, teach, preach, follow or get out of the cotton-picking way."

This is precisely what NABO's first national summit conference will and must demand if we are to successfully confront the massive problems of joblessness, black-on-black crime, poor housing and inadequate education, pernicious drugs and family breakdown ravaging our black American communities. The time for ego posturing is over. We must and will act together now.

and provincial power sharing arrangements and an interim administration of both parties.

"Although the MPLA has won the elections, Savimbi has shown that he has a vast following throughout the country and especially in the important central provinces of Bie, Huambo and Benguela," said a diplomat. "No party can rule Angola without the other especially given the challenge of economic reconstruction. A way has to be found to keep UNITA on board and that means finding a place for Savimbi because Savimbi is the problem and the way he rules UNITA means that UNITA can't accept anything which doesn't please the boss."

For years Angola was described as Africa's Vietnam, the center of conflict witnessing major involvement by two foreign armies — South Africa's and Cuba's — as well as military support from countries as diverse as the former Soviet Union, Morocco, Israel and the U.S. Savimbi was a leading player on this bloody stage and has fought the Communist-backed MPLA since its installation as the country's government in 1975. During his reign as U.S. president, Ronald Reagan authorized millions of dollars of arms support for Savimbi saying, "We are moved by the efforts of freedom fighters such as Jonas Savimbi and the members of UNITA." They deserve our support in their brave struggle against Soviet-Cuban imperialism in Angola." Currently Savimbi has refused to meet with senior officials from the US accusing Washington of siding with the ruling party during the elections, a charge that American officials have called "ludicrous."

Despite his broad support inside Angola, Savimbi's attempts for leadership of Angola have been openly opposed by the U.S. civil rights community, primarily because of the arms and military support he received from South Africa. Throughout the 1970s and '80s, Savimbi attempted to forge no bonds with America's civil rights leaders nor discourage his South African mentor, Agostinho Neto, who said in 1969, "That people fighting for their independence will take aid from wherever they can find it is clear. To win our independence we should take aid, as they say, from the Devil himself."

Although officials of MPLA's ruling party have expressed a desire to work out some kind of understanding with Dr. Savimbi, a foreign ministry official warned, "We will not allow Savimbi to hold the whole country hostage." UNITA officials meanwhile have continued to their attacks in Angola's conference rooms and streets openly stating, "Any solution must avoid outright victory for one side and humiliation for the other."

Angolan Feuding Not Over Yet

After almost two decades of war, the feuding factions in Angola have participated in the country's first free elections, but the fighting may not be over yet. Angola's president Jose Eduardo dos Santos, who won 51 percent of the vote, is urging his former civil war foe Jonas Savimbi to put aside his doubts about widespread fraud and vote rigging and work to consolidate democracy in the southern African country after 16 years of war. Since the voting, scattered fighting was reported in the capital city of Luanda and among rebel strongholds in the countryside.

"There is no longer a place in Angola for hatred, revenge or discrimination," said MPLA (Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola) leader dos Santos to UNITA (National Union for the Total Liberation of Angola) leader Savimbi recently on state radio in the former Portuguese colony. The victorious MPLA government has invited UNITA to join a government of national unity and accept electoral defeat. But, Savimbi has dismissed the vote tally and threatened to resume the war he waged until a cease-fire 18 months ago.

Official election returns showed President dos Santos leading Savimbi by 51 percent to 38 percent, with the rest divided among nine other candidates. In parliamentary elections, which is the official political system in Angola, the preliminary figures showed the MPLA party with nearly 56 percent of the vote, compared with 33 percent for UNITA. Savimbi is holding out refusing to accept the vote, saying that his UNITA party will only accept a power-sharing agreement with the ruling party and is demanding that a provisional government be set up pending new presidential and parliamentary elections. International efforts are underway, led by South African Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha, to draft a compromise acceptable to both parties. Under consideration is a second round of presidential elections between dos Santos and Savimbi to produce a government of national unity with genuine national by Benjamin F. Chavis Jr.

Viewing the 1992 presidential debates on television has been a very sobering experience, especially for people of color in this country. We live in a society where both symbol and substance are important whenever there are opportunities for the nation as a whole to practice democracy. It is therefore critical to note the presence of the absence of references to the plights of millions of persons of color in the national political debates.

Is the sight of three white men running for the White House a sign of the past or of the future? During the large rallies in some areas, both the Democrats and the Republicans as well as the Perot supporters have drawn almost exclusive white audiences with just a small sprinkling of persons of color to be found.

Now there is nothing wrong when white voters come out to cheer and support the candidates of their choice. That is not the issue.

The issue is, after what happened just a few months ago in Los Angeles, how can the political debate ignore the growing national problem of racial injustice? The domestic agendas as articulated by the three leading candidates thus far have not included the specific dire social and economic conditions of large portions of the minority communities.

We know that there are some who would say that the campaign should be kept positive and these issues would be negative and divisive. We take exception to that view. In fact, too much of the body politic of this society rests on dodging the real issues. But the painful reality in 1992 is not that the issues dear to people of color communities are being misinterpreted; it is that these issues are being deliberately ignored.

The three leading candidates all have stressed the importance of their respective experience in government or in business. The problem with the 1992 campaign is that no one has yet stated a clear vision of how to bring the gifts of diversity to this nation together in a manner where the contributions of all the various racial and ethnic communities are welcomed and celebrated rather than feared and ignored.

Politically speaking, it is as if the 1992 presidential campaign has covertly condoned a type of ethnic cleansing where

Interlocking Interest Rates Interfere With Internal Growth

While the Rev. Jesse Jackson just keeps plowing along with his Rainbow Coalition to collect people of all colors together in one country, economics have equalized the world with interest rates. The cost of money in Europe affects the interest rates charged on home mortgages and credit cards in this country. Cutting short-term interest rates has not helped the U.S. economy to rise. It is long-term interest rates that individuals and corporations are interested in for real life. The reduction in long-term interest rates such as bonds and mortgage rates is still to come in this country. Considering the reluctance of European countries to lower their rates, it may be some time before long-term interest rates drop.

Deutsche marks, the German currency, is strong because of its high interest rates. The Germans are afraid of inflation which is caused when there is too much money chasing too few goods. The excess money in Germany was created with the marriage of East and West Germany with East Germany getting money without producing enough products. Most of East Germany's production was subpar and had to be shut down. Doing this while the East Germans had many marks in their hands helped to set the stage for runaway inflation. Thus, raising interest rates means money or marks are used in cash transactions rather than with additional borrowing which would create even more marks. However, Germany, England, France and nine other countries are tied together in the European Economic Community. Their currencies must trade together. Therefore, if marks go up, pounds and francs go up.

These currencies offer the investor far more attractive interest rates than U.S. investments; 12 percent versus 8 percent in long term instruments and 9 percent versus 3 percent on a daily basis.

This leaves only U.S. business to invest in its own company. The prospects of a fast economic recovery is not too bright to them. The new computer technology has also enabled big business to keep a tight control over inventory. In past recoveries, lower cost to carry increases in inventory would help to surge an economic recovery. Therefore, before inventory spending can become a factor in the U.S. economic recovery, long-term interest rates have to come down to unheard of levels like 5 and 6 percent to become a factor in the U.S. economic recovery. Without a decline in foreign interest rates, it's not likely the U.S. can continue to cut its interest rates. Investment dollars will simply stay in a foreign affair where they get more bang for their bucks.

Mailou Art Fest Draws Crowds

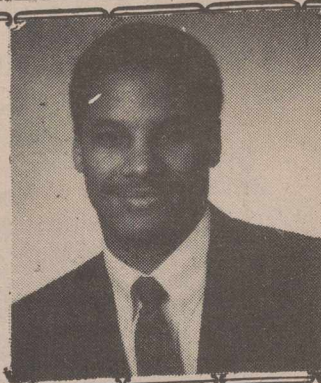

TAMPA — The Mailou Art Fest, the first annual art festival produced by the Museum of African-American Art, is named in honor of Mailou Jones, artist and educator. Jones' work was among the first to be exhibited at the Barnett-Aden Gallery. The festival celebrates the artistic accomplishments and contributions of artists of African descent to American art.

On Friday, Oct. 16, the festival kicked off with the World on Tap international beer and food tasting festival hosted by the Downtown Corps.

Oct. 17-18 featured an exhibition by nationally known African-American and Florida visual artists, entertainment and continuous workshops, demonstrations of craft traditions and techniques and folk traditions. (Photos by David Burgess)

CD Alternatives

I have recently been flooded with questions on how to get a better return on CDs while still maintaining safety.

The answer will differ for each individual, so I will offer the following guidelines and suggestions that may help you find a decent and safe return.

The major guidelines deal with inflation, taxes and risk.

Currently CD rates are close to the rate of inflation. In addition you must pay taxes on your CD interest. The net result is that after taxes and inflation your CD and its interest earnings may actually buy less goods and services than it did one year ago.

The risk of owning a CD is not so much that the bank may fail, the risk is your purchasing power may be eroded by taxes and inflation.

But don't worry. Here are two suggestions that may lessen the effects of taxes and inflation.

Consider owning tax-free investments that are insured. Your return will automatically increase simply because you do not have to pay taxes. In addition, tax-free securities historically offer higher rates than bank deposits.

Or consider owning insured government bonds. Many mutual funds offer U.S. government securities funds that have significantly higher rates than bank deposits.

Getting a better return on your CDs or money market funds is possible.

To get more information on those possibilities, speak with a knowledgeable professional who can help you decide what is the most appropriate investment for you. I offer the first consultation free of charge.

Assistance For Low-Income Families

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Connie Mack (R-FL) announces that additional vouchers and certificates have been approved to help give a greater number of very low-income families in the Tampa Bay area greater flexibility to choose their own housing and promote self-sufficiency.

"One of the goals of housing policy must be to help people take control of their lives and become independent, allowing them to live closer to jobs and transportation," Mack said. "Vouchers and certificates promote self-sufficiency not found in bricks and mortar programs."

The assistance, which has been awarded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in the form of Section 8 certificates and vouchers, will be made available to the following housing authorities:

- Hernando County, 25 certificates or $159,168;
 - Hillsborough County, 25 certificates or $155,204;
 - Pasco County, 25 certificates or $152,003;
 - Pinellas County, 25 certificates or $124,968 (assistance to very low income families for whom the lack of adequate housing is a primary factor in the separation from their children);
 - Plant City, 25 vouchers or $177,685;
 - Tampa, 25 certificates or $181,590;
 - Tampa, 20 certificates or $142,678 (assistance to very low income families for whom the lack of adequate housing is a primary factor in the separation from their children).
- Mack is a member of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs.

It has become taboo to even mention racial or ethnic concerns. This is ironic when a close election will be depending upon how well the masses of the underprivileged are mobilized to vote for a new direction and a change in the occupancy of the White House.

Of course, we are encouraging a large voter turnout next month. Despite the absence of racial justice and other critical issues in this campaign, it is important to participate in the political process. Too many sisters and brothers have suffered and died to get the right to vote and a large representation of voters will ensure that a change comes with a mandate.

BILL YOUNG KICKS OFF 1992 CAMPAIGN

“We need to keep Congressman Young in Congress. He took time out to be with me and my child. I thank God so many times that we have a man in Congress who cares about people. He treated me and Grant like family.”

St. Petersburg's Mary Robinson
Saturday, October 17, 1992

BILL YOUNG — HE'S ALWAYS THERE FOR US . . .

"In this neighborhood health center, I have the opportunity to build relationships with patients and families that might be more difficult in another setting. I am better able to deliver a service central to pediatric care: prevention," she explains.

According to Dr. Robinson, prevention is the cornerstone of pediatrics. At the health center, the facets of prevention include immunizations, screening for sickle cell trait and lead poisoning and education.

"Perhaps the most important facet is education. Sitting down and talking to patients and parents about the many health care issues that emerge from one visit to the next. I have found that talking to an asthmatic child and parent about what their illness is and how to live with it goes a long way than simply prescribing a medication. It can mean the difference between constant emergency room visits and well controlled asthmatic with periodic clinic follow up," she says.

"Because we as pediatricians are with our patients from birth, we can capitalize on their resiliency and potential for growth. To prevent or detect an illness early on, affords us a chance to help improve a child's quality of life. The potential for a chance to achieve such a goal makes it clear why health centers such as ours are a vital part of the health care system," Dr. Robinson concludes.

ant renowned fashion commentator/educator/choreographer Mr. Filyau. In fact he named her first business, Christine's House of Fashion. Bell said she did not have any problem with the fashion part of the business, but she had to make it her business to learn to transact business. She learned by doing and has acquired a lot of business know-how over the years.

Bell sews for men, women and children and serves as a fashion consultant to many who need help in choosing appropriate styles for various occasions. She considers innovation and originality in fashion the basis for good taste and creativity in dressing. Her knockout suit made from drapery material, a black velvet dress with an outrageous ostrich feathered neckline, a glittery gold sequined dress with white rabbit fur and a chic black mohair suit adorned with the richness of silk (worn in photo) are just a few of Bell's creations which personify versatility and individuality.

Bell will again organize a modeling troupe of all ages and all sizes. "I have always included full figured women in my modeling group. Some of my best models were full figured," she says. She designed and sewed beautiful fashions for full figured women long before top designers thought about including glamorous clothing for large women in their line of fashion.

Colors blend beautifully in the interior of the home. Yes, she does interior decorating, but mostly for herself. She has created a color scheme of charm and softness. Her home expresses warmth and a "make yourself at home" atmosphere.

Bell's daughter, Brenda Austin, is a very able assistant in the business. Like her mother, she has an eye for fashion and good business sense.

You don't have to go far away places to find made-to-order fashions or fantasize about high-priced fashions by designers with strange sounding names. Just call or stop by House of Fashions and Bell will help you create your own fantasy fashion, uniquely yours by Christine.

What's Happening In & Around Clearwater

by Frank Jackson

Clearwater Affordable Housing Fair

To be able to boast of a first always goes down in the history books, and Clearwater can be justifiably proud of the Clearwater Affordable Housing Fair which was a first on Saturday, Oct. 17 at the Martin Luther King Center. The affair was endorsed by the North Greenwood Association, Clearwater Neighborhood Housing Service, the city of Clearwater and The Weekly Challenger newspaper, which provided free advertisement.

There were many benefits to be derived from the fair, but it was intended for low and middle-income persons who wish to qualify for the purchase of a new home.

There were several mini-seminars, among them: (1) affordable housing and loan opportunities; (2) how to clean up your credit (a great success); (3) what to look for in buying a home; (4) budgeting tips.

The Community Service Foundation, which has Charlie Mann as its executive director, was one of the coordinators and Jiffy Johnson, publicity director for the foundation, as much in evidence. Various banks such as the First National Bank with branch manager Pearl Mack Johnson was represented, as was First Union, First Florida, Southeast Bank and many others had tables with employees there to explain the various opportunities offered by the banks.

But it wasn't all work, for the very popular Jimmy Pendleton and wife Yvette of Big Jim's Barbecue Pit, served a continental breakfast and a very tasty lunch. We remind our readers to patronize the businesses which advertise in the Challenger. We commend the Pendletons for their many services to the community. More on them later.

Special meals were prepared for the children and baby sitting was available. The event was a great success and we hope that it will be repeated next year.

Brown's one-person exhibit at the Barnett-Aden Gallery took place in February 1946 in Washington, DC. Included in that exhibit were three oil paintings, "Global War," "Global Peace" and "War," a print titled "War, Blood and Tears" and a watercolor, "Twins," which was placed in the permanent collection.

Questions of Beauty

by Deanie K. Victor

Billions of dollars are spent each year on beauty products. Of course, almost everyone wants to look their best. Beauty costs more than money, however. It requires a commitment of a beauty routine. Contrary to what many think, it really doesn't take a long time, especially when you get used to it. The skin is a big concern because it radiates and reflects health and beauty.

Before you buy products, it is important to get the correct analysis of your skin type. There are three types of skin. That is dry skin, oily skin and combination skin. Any one of those skin types can have problems.

Those who have oily skin can usually easily recognize their skin type. When they cleanse the skin, before much time has passed, the oil has reappeared. Overnight, the oils build up and upon arising, there will be an accumulation of oil on the face. If it is not kept clean, acne will develop when the oil is mixed with dirt and bacteria.

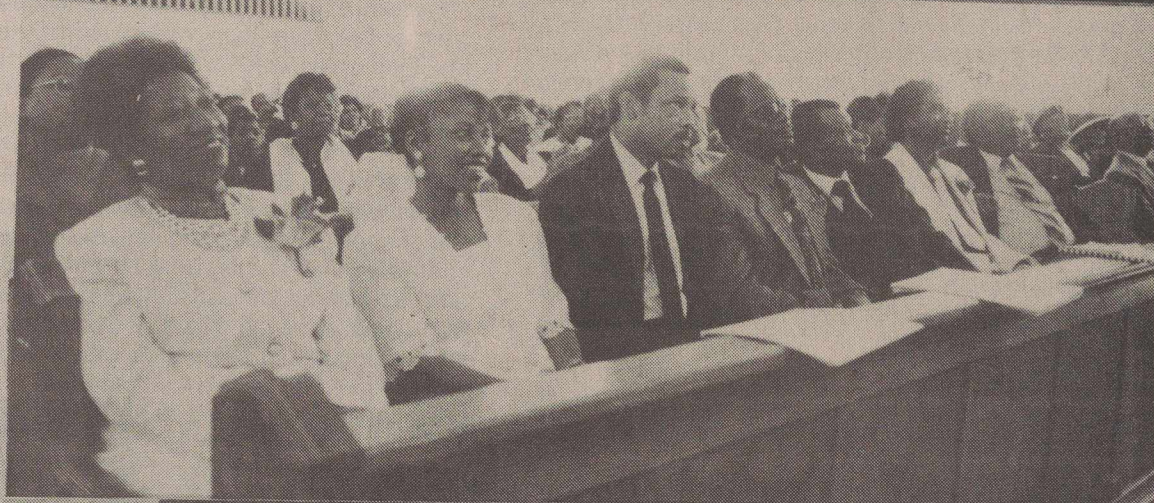

Purifying the skin includes exfoliating the dead skin cells. What is used to cleanse the face depends on the selection of the product line. Granules are found in a formula for oily skin and also combination. A special soap for the skin is gentle and mild and not the same formulation as the soap you use to take a bath or shower. While the granules are not always recommended for daily use, the cleansing bar is used at least twice a day. A creamy cleanser is used on dry skin.

A toner or an astringent is used following the cleansing process to balance, refresh and invigorate the skin. It helps to firm up the skin and to fight bacteria. A moisturizing step comes next. This will impart moisture, protect and prepare the skin before the use of any makeup. A word of caution though is not to use too much. The practice of using a small amount dotting it on the forehead, the nose, both the cheeks and the chin, then smoothing it over the face with the fingertips will allow the skin to breathe and help the makeup to look better. Not to mention that it will also stretch the dollars by not wasting the products.

Each beauty line has its own regimen to follow. But basics are generally the same. Never skip the daily cleansing, the toning and the moisturizing. Never go to bed with makeup on. Start with clean skin before applying makeup. Makeup should be natural and not theatrical for daytime wear.

Following these simple suggestions can lead to pleasant and positive answers to the question of beauty.

Raymond James Underwrites Stock Market Game

ST. PETERSBURG — Raymond James Financial (NYSE:RJF) recently donated $7,425 to the Pinellas County school system for the underwriting of the Pinellas County Stock Market Game, Inc., according to Francis S. Godbold, president of the investment services firm.

Raymond James donation was matched by the New York Stock Exchange during the recent visit of its chair, William Donaldson, making the total donation $14,425. This amount funds the game for two years.

The stock market game teaches middle and high school students about the fundamentals of buying and selling stocks, as well as building, monitoring and making adjustments to hypothetical stock portfolios. Since 1986, the stock market game has taught more than 8,000 Pinellas County students to hone their math, reading, communication and analytical skills. It also helps them to develop interpersonal relationships and learn to work as a team.

Receives Certification

On Sept. 1, 1992, Gwendolyn Brewton Dawson received certification as an economic development finance professional from the National Development Council (NDC). Certification is a designation given to individuals who successfully complete an intensive economic development finance training series conducted by NDC. The four courses provide individuals working in the field of economic development with training in credit analysis, real estate financing, loan packaging, deal structuring and negotiating and the creation and implementation of development programs.

Each of the four courses is five days long and ends with a presentation and written examination, which must be passed before a certification candidate is allowed to continue in the EDFP program. When a candidate has completed the entire four-week series, a comprehensive examination is given. Dawson completed one of the courses in Baltimore, MD (score of 100%) and the other three in San Francisco, CA (scores of 93% and 98%).

Dawson has been employed by the city of Gainesville for 4½ years and presently serves as an economic development officer. She is responsible for packaging Small Business Administration loans, housing rehabilitation loans and grants, first-time homebuyers loan and coordinating other economic development projects. Dawson is an honor graduate of the University of Florida with a BS degree in accounting and a master's degree in business administration from Nova University in Ft. Lauderdale.

Her extracurricular activities include serving as co-chair of the supervisory committee of the Gainesville City Employees Credit Union, member of the Neighborhood Housing Development Corp. loan committee, member of the North Central Florida chapter of the National Forum for Black Public Administrators, board member of the Gainesville/Ocala chapter of the Institute of Management Accountants and member of the National Association of Female Executives.

As active as she is, Dawson still manages to find time to operate an accounting business out of her home and serve as financial secretary and various other auxiliaries of her church, Liberty Chapel.

Dawson resides in Fairfield with her husband Winston and two daughters, Wantanisha and Quinshara. She is the daughter of Jacquelyn and Dewey Brewton Jr. of Blythe.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN

These are the units to measure the worth of a man, regardless of birth.

Not how did he die? But, how did he live?

Not what did he gain? But, what did he give?

Not what was his station? But, had he a heart? And how did he play his God-given part? Was he ever ready with a word of good cheer to bring back a smile to banish a tear?

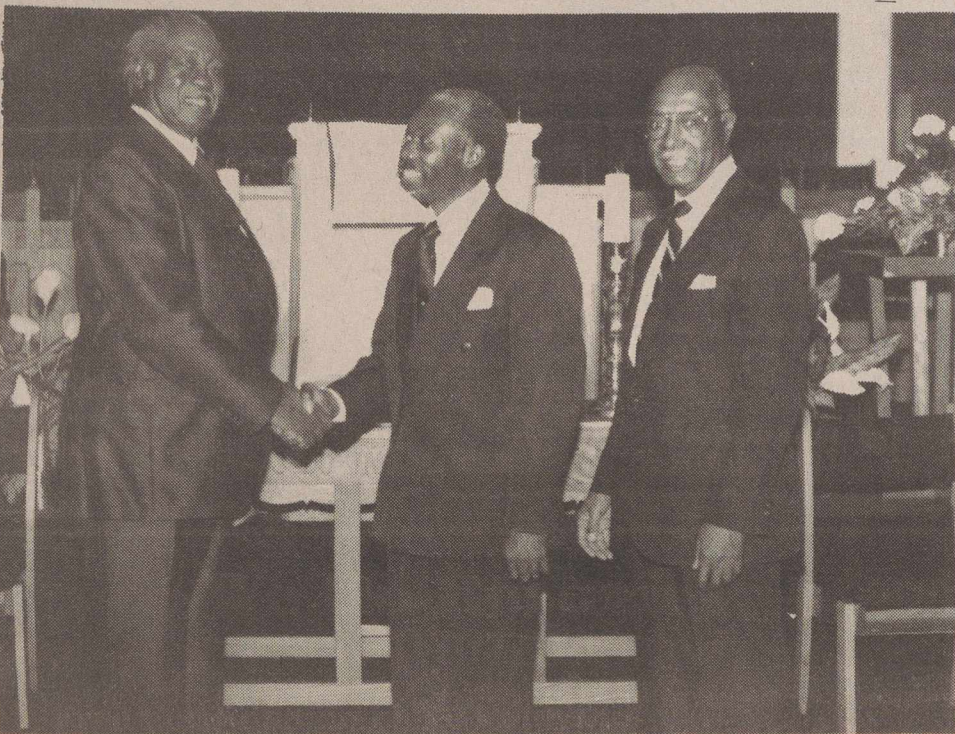

Not what was his church? Not what was his creed? But, had he befriended those really in need?

Not what did the sketch in the newspaper say? But, how many were sorry when he passed away?

The Presidential Debates

by Roosevelt Rimes Jr.

Now that the presidential debates are over, what issues were not addressed? First let's start with jobs. No candidate said anything about how they are going to re-industrialize this nation. No need, you see with the free trade agreement, other nations will make what we want at a lower cost with cheaper labor.

The issue of crime was not addressed. No need, hire 100,000 more police officers per big city per year until everyone is a law officer. AIDS was not talked about because only a certain group of people get it. Justice was not discussed, the reason being they know what's best for us. Low-income housing was not mentioned. What for when you cannot pay your rent.

The homeless were not addressed. No need, they can wait until they die off. Education not being equal was left out. No need, Japan will train you to their needs. Racism was skipped over. Why? People with that problem don't vote. People in Haiti were not talked about. What for, they have no oil plus we have enough trouble with the ones we have now; we don't need any more.

These are just some of the things that were not addressed and the reasons they were not addressed. Rock the vote or it will rock you.

Something To Think About

by
John Henry Hill
Spring Hill, FL

Let's Face It!

It seems like the Republican Party has, in the past, acted as though they could win elections without the majority of the African-American vote. They were right.

It is also painfully obvious that the Democratic Party has been taking the black vote for granted for quite some time.

Both parties know that voter apathy is prevalent among Americans in general and even more so with African Americans. They are aware that they only have to woo the people who vote.

That's why it is important to vote even if you're not too keen on any of the candidates. Even if the candidate that a particular district votes for loses, the votes are still counted. Prospective candidates for future elections scrutinize the statistics on voting patterns, districts, ethnic groups, socio-economic status, age, etc.

Politicians plan their election strategy around the people who vote. Incumbents can depend on the people who are benefiting from the policies of the reigning administration to vote. If you don't vote, you don't count.

Having witnessed the struggle of the '60s when black and white men and women died trying to get southern African Americans (then referred to as Negroes) registered in "Jim Crow" counties which used every means, including murder, to keep black people from the voting booths, I am appalled at the apathy shown by people who don't even bother to register now that they can do it without fear.

This year's election is going down in history as a very interesting, maybe even extraordinary event. An incumbent who is trailing his number one rival, a few days before election time, a non-politician lingering in the shadow of the polls, making people aware of a mess that neither of the most likely winners can deny — all makes for an election that will certainly be recorded by historians as a remarkable contest, no matter who wins.

Those of you who are contemplating sitting out this election, bear in mind that one day your children or grandchildren are going to ask how you voted in the presidential election of 1992.

What will you tell them?
Think about it!

MATRONS AND YWA ANNIVERSARY

An exhilarating evening was spent at New Zion MB Church on Sunday beginning at 3:30. Presiding over this inspiring program was Doris Jackson. She was instrumental in keeping the program moving and managed two heart-warming solos along the way.

The theme was "Get A Transfer" and Embra Grant set in motion the tone for the evening with her unique welcome and occasion. Selections came from the True Pentacostal Church of God choir, responsive reading was led by Cynthia Wise and a presentation for outstanding leadership to the Matrons was given to Erma Rush by Vanessye Woods.

The dynamic speaker for the evening was Geraldine Rivers from Truevine MB Church, Sarasota. She was introduced by Johnnie Jones. Mrs. Rivers is a very able speaker and her message on "Get A Transfer" took the congregation from one spiritual level to the next. The message was well administered and she was given a standing ovation. Words of thanks were given by Harriet McMillian and Matron president, Anita Johnson, who is also the daughter of Geraldine Rivers.

Matrons and YWA officers are Anita Johnson, president; Vanessye Woods, vice president; Tara Woods, secretary; Tanya Epps, assistant secretary; Narvella Haynes, Bible expositor, and Embra Grant, assistant expositor. Packers' Coach Aids Black Breakthrough

You may never have heard of Mike Holmgren. He's the new head coach of the Green Bay Packers. He's white. But when it comes to hiring quality people, Holmgren may be color blind.

Holmgren has created a story that has been overlooked by most of the media. He has become the first NFL coach in history to hire two black men as his offensive and defensive coordinators.

This is big stuff.

For years, blacks have struggled to gain high-profile coaching positions and an offensive or defensive coordinator's job is a stepping stone to the head job with some college or NFL team. The offensive coordinator designs the offense and usually calls the plays. The defensive coordinator does a similar job with his players.

When Holmgren was ready to make these important hires, he turned to Ray Rhodes and Sherman Lewis.

Everyone knows a buddy system exists in the NFL, and for once, that buddy train had paid off for some black coaches. Rhodes, Lewis and Holmgren were all assistant coaches for the San Francisco 49ers. When the Packers hired Holmgren this season, he didn't forget Rhodes and Lewis.

"It's tough, period, to get coaching jobs in pro ball," Lewis told the New York Times. "The people making the decisions are hiring friends and they are not black people. I have so many black friends in college coaching who want to get to pro ball badly. People in pro ball tend to hire others in pro ball or ex-players."

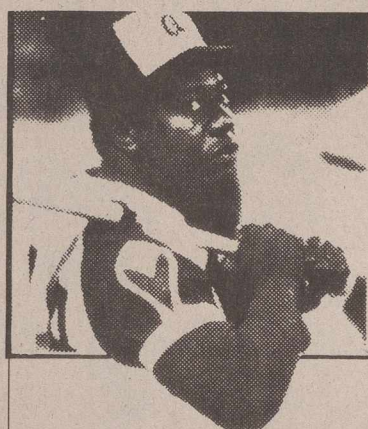

Rhodes said: "There are many qualified black coordinators out there. There are good black coaches out there who have paid their dues like us."

Rhodes, 41, who was a player with the New York Giants and 49ers, started his coaching career with San Francisco in 1981. Lewis, 50, coached for 14 years at Michigan State and six with the 49ers. Holmgren has praised both of his coordinators and has even called Rhodes "the best teacher I have even been around, bar none."

Lewis and Rhodes realize that they may never have gotten a chance to become an NFL coordinator were it not for their relationship with Holmgren.

"With Mike, we can apply what we've learned," Rhodes said. "Mike went out and got the best people he could find. Mike knows he is going to get the best."

"It is very important that we do well."

The Secrets of Success

Everybody knows that good pitching will win more ballgames than any single element of the game. Other than pitching, defense unquestionably is the greatest tool in baseball.

As I look over the current teams, there is one that has both pitching and defense, as well as solid hitting. Forgive me my personal pride in the success of the Atlanta Braves. Over the years, I have watched players like pitcher Tom Glavine and outfielder Ron Gant struggle in the minor leagues before finally gaining the confidence and building the abilities necessary to make it big in the majors.

Aside from pitching, hitting and defense, the 1992 Atlanta Braves are blessed with one other game-breaking weapon — team speed. Speed does so much for a team. It puts pressure on the opposition. For the Braves, a player like Otis Nixon or Deion Sanders disrupts a pitcher's carefully practiced routine. The presence of one of these two burners on the base paths can change a pitcher's delivery and make him throw a fat fastball right over the heart of the plate.

The Braves remind many people of the 1969 "Miracle Mets." That team beat Atlanta in the first-ever National League divisional playoff, before dispatching the favored Baltimore Orioles in the World Series.

The Mets were propelled by their fantastic pitching staff, which included recently inducted Hall of Famer Tom Seaver, and sure-fire future Hall member, Nolan Ryan. Taking nothing away from that New York team, I believe that this year's version of the Atlanta Braves, from home plate to the outfield, is deeper and better.

I also believe the Braves will be a team to be reckoned with for years to come. Their pitching staff is very young. John Smoltz is only 25. Steve Avery is just a baby at 22 years old. The team has several solid stars in Gant, David Justice and last year's Most Valuable Player, Terry Pendleton. There is no limit to these players' futures, and any of them could develop into a superstar.

It's certainly too early to talk about dynasties. Injuries and contract disputes can ruin any team. But when you look at the talent in the Braves' minor-league system, this team is going to be a winner for a long time to come. II

Hank Aaron is the top home-run hitter of all time with 755 homers. A member of baseball's Hall of Fame, Hank is senior vice president of the Atlanta Braves.

Ask Barry

Q. I thought there was a salary cap in professional basketball. How can the Orlando Magic pay Shaquille O'Neal $40 million?

A. There are all sorts of loopholes in the NBA's salary cap. When a team is trying to form a salary for a new player, such as O'Neal, it need only fit his first-year pay "under the cap." The Magic are paying Shaquille a first-year salary of about $3.5 million a year and are escalating it by 30 percent each year for the next six years. The contract has been done by the rules and O'Neal becomes the richest rookie in the history of sports. He's going to be so rich that it's scary. He's only 20 years old, which means by the time he is 27, he will have earned some $70 million from salary and endorsements.

Q. What was all that noise I heard from Michael Jordan about him not wanting to attend training camp this season?

A. Jordan said some of his comments were taken out of context. He had hinted that he might need some additional time to rest because of his participation in the Olympics, but when the Chicago Bulls' training camp started, Air Jordan was on hand.

Q. Is it true that Dominique Wilkins' mother thought about raising a stink at his wedding recently? I heard she doesn't like the girl he married at all.

A. Wilkins' wedding, which may have been one of the most expensive in the history of the city of Atlanta, went off without a hitch. Wilkins' mother attended although she originally didn't like the idea of her son, 32, marrying a young college student. Reportedly, the Atlanta police chief visited with Wilkins' mother prior to the wedding, trying to ward off any problems. There wasn't any fuss at all and Wilkins, once one of the NBA's most sought-after bachelors, now is a married man. Wilkins plays for the Atlanta Hawks.

Q. What is Doug Williams doing now?

A. Williams, former star at Grambling and the first black quarterback ever to play in the Super Bowl, is out of football and living in Louisiana. Look for him to return to the game next season as either a head coach of a black college or as an assistant in the NFL. He nearly joined his old team, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, this season as an assistant, but the deal fell through.

Black College Classic A Gold Mine by Barry Cooper

These days, the last place you would expect a black college football game to be played is on a black college campus. OK, that's stretching the truth a bit, but not by much.

Black college athletic programs, struggling to keep their teams afloat, are moving games off campus and into major metropolitan areas. Top black colleges such as Grambling, Florida A&M, Bethune-Cookman, Tennessee State and Southern University now are playing as many as seven of their 11 games on the road. The reason for the traveling road shows in simple: money.

FAMU and Tennessee State recently played in Atlanta and drew a crowd of more than 40,000 at Fulton County Stadium. Tickets were priced at a premium and the two schools realized profits of nearly $200,000 each.

That's a lot of money for a black college program and in most cases, it's more than the schools could hope to earn by playing at home. FAMU played before nearly 75,000 fans in Miami (against the No. 1 ranked Hurricanes) but drew only about 10,000 at home against Howard University.

All the black colleges have learned that the way to make money is to take the games to the fans — preferably to cities with large stadiums and large black populations.

"I doubt very seriously that we would have had enough space for the Tennessee State game if we had played at Bragg Stadium," said FAMU athletic director Walter Reed. "I also doubt that we would have had the kind of attendance we will have if we had played (North Carolina) A&T at home."

FAMU moved the A&T game to Orlando and drew nearly 25,000 fans.

Moving games to neutral sites has been so successful for the black colleges that they no longer care about participating in the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs. Grambling and Southern play their Bayou Classic on the same day as the opening weekend of the playoffs.

"For us, the Bayou Classic is our playoff," Grambling coach Eddie Robinson said.

Most of the largest black colleges are spending about $1 million a year on their football programs. But they must also take in enough money through football to fund other sports, such as women's athletics. That's why the classics are so popular.

Prayer is a tremendous force. It can heal a broken body... repair a severed relationship... or restore a joy that has been lost. The Gospels tell us of the times when Jesus would withdraw from the crowds to pray, and the times when He would enter the synagogue to worship. Have you been utilizing the power of prayer in your life?

PEACE WITH GOD; ACCESS TO GOD; AND THE HOPE OF GLORY

According to Romans 4:25, Christ was delivered to death for our sins and then raised from the dead because He had fully settled our debt that we might be justified. The results of this mighty work of redemption are marvelous indeed to ponder over.

First, it means for every believer in Christ that "being justified by faith we have peace with God" (Rom. 5:1). If Christ has paid for our sins and the barrier between God and us has been removed, why should we not enjoy peace with God? Why should we not rise in the morning, go about our work during the day, and retire at night with complete confidence that all is well; that we are at peace with God and that He loves us as His own?

But more: Verse 2 goes on to say that by Christ we also have "access by faith into this grace wherein we stand." If the barrier of sin has been removed and we are at peace with God, what is there to keep us from His presence? Especially when He bids us to "come boldly unto the throne of grace," that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." How wonderful to have a standing before God in grace! To be at peace with Him and to enjoy free access into His presence by faith!

But there is still more. Not only does the believer in Christ enjoy peace with God and access to God, but, as this same verse says: "We rejoice in hope of the glory of God."

"Hope" in the Bible is, of course, more than a wish. It is an eager anticipation of wonderful things to come. Hebrews 6:19 says: "Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast." Man has always been afraid of the glory of God. When the glory of the Lord shone round about the Judean shepherds "they were sore afraid." This was because "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). But the simplest believer in Christ may rejoice in the anticipation of sharing God's glory some day. This is the clear teaching of the Word of God.

Black Music Revisited

by
Ricky Lyons
Greetings,
Music Lovers!

This has really been a magnificent week for black culture and jazz music in the bay area. The Museum of African-American Art hosted the Mailou Art Fest in downtown Tampa this weekend. It was a howling success, however, it was much of a surprise and disappointment to many of the jazz enthusiasts who were expecting to possibly hear some traditional jazz performed by some of our local jazz artists.

We cannot continue to overlook the vast amount of professional talent that resides in the bay area. There are many well-known, internationally famous artists who would welcome the honor of performing for such a distinguished occasion.

We must remember that jazz, the blues, R&B, reggae, calypso, Gospel, etc. is black art. It is intelligently classified as a performing art.

The Clearwater Jazz Festival was held this weekend in Clearwater. Once again, there was a great camouflaged effort to disguise black music by using groups that perform a considerable amount of fusion jazz. It seems to me that it would have been a logical idea to start such a historical occasion with traditional modern jazz performed by some of the excellent local talent that is readily available. These mistakes should be brought to the attention of individuals in positions to make change for a better jazz festival in the future.

The Movement

Faster than a speeding bullet, more powerful than any train and doper than it oughta be, "Jump" is the smash single by Los Angeles hipno raveaters, The Movement. What is hipno? It's what The Movement has dubbed their slammin' sound and like the tag implies, it's a bass heavy BPM explosion of hip hop stance combined with techno's exhilarating pace and attitude. A former Billboard No. 1 club single, one of only three techno songs to do so, "Jump" is just one of the hyped up cuts on The Movement's debut EP, and like the exciting scene that The Movement pulsated out of, the EP is merely the first warning shot of the coming dance culture revolution.

The Movement is rapper/DJ/dancer Hazze, born in Oklahoma and raised in LA; keyboardist and computer wizard AJ Mora, born in Costa Rica; and Canadian born Richard "Humpty" Visson on turntables and drums. Raised on the streets of LA, they all joined forces after individually serving time in the dance floor trenches, DJing and devoting their lives to tracking down the perfect beats. AJ and Richard both worked in Power 106's research department and began making music together.

Unlike other technorave groups who have experimented with hip hop, The Movement mixes it up, slowing down the BPM fury to a more rock steady poace and tosses in raggamuffin stylings and freestyle verve, making hipno one of the hottest, born in the USA variations on the techno sound.

"Jump" is just the tip of the hipno iceberg. The Movement's EP contains smokin jams like "Tell Tu Mama," a wild technoreggae fusion which Hazze says is The Movement's way of letting the crowd know that "virtual reality is better than nitrous of X."

Candidates For PSC Post

Arthur Anderson

Julia Johnson

TALLAHASSEE — Julia Johnson, a top state official with the Florida Department of Community Affairs, and Arthur Anderson, a professor at Florida Atlantic University, are two of six names sent to Gov. Lawton Chiles for consideration to a seat on the Public Service Commission (PSC) which regulates the state's multi-billion dollar utility industry. PSC decisions impact monthly water, light, sewer and telephone bills.

According to PSC nominating council chair Andy Blank, the council felt an emphasis to appoint minorities to ensure that all interested are factored into PSC decisions. At present, there are no African Americans on the commission.

Johnson, an attorney, is a specialist in land use and state planning issues. A native of Clermont, FL, she received undergraduate and law degrees from the University of Florida.

Anderson is a member of the Palm Beach County school board and also serves as a corporate consultant on education issues. He holds a doctorate from Michigan State University.

NPDUM Rectification Conference

by Alvelita Donaldson

ST. PETERSBURG — The St. Petersburg branch of the National People's Democratic Uhuru Movement has scheduled Oct. 24-25 for a conference designed to heighten its capacity to build a movement in St. Pete which will significantly raise the question of self-determination as the highest form of democracy for African people.

Our goal is to bring a broad base of the community into active political life.

Leadership training will be one of the key elements of the conference.

In order to build programs which will deal with the day-to-day problems which we are confronted with as a result of our powerlessness, it is a must that NPDUM build the appropriate subcommittee to organize around issues which keep us subservient to the white power system.

It is imperative that we build a genuine movement to expose and undermine the U.S. government's counter-insurgency which is nothing less than an undeclared war against our people.

We must begin to begin to defend our national democratic rights which means we must organize an effective defense campaign.

In the past we have made some errors. The conference will help to rectify those errors and usher in a new, creative, motivated, committed and determined leadership.

The challenge is to develop political leadership within NPDUM. This means studying, training and implementing community control campaigns.

It's not always easy to love others, especially when they look or think differently than we do. Yet John the Evangelist reminds us "that we should believe in the name of his son Jesus Christ and love one another, just as he has commanded us." One way to grow in that love is by sharing in the fellowship of a faith community.

WORD of GOD

Seek The Lord

I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offense, and seek my face: in their affliction they will seek me early.
