Kuwait Day Two

Posted January 15, 2014 at 3:27 pm by mbastudents

We met with a group of Islamic bankers and learned a lot with the principal, lead legal expert and their PR person. It was a really good meeting with a bunch of practical business folks who need to succeed with certain rules of compliance. We then met with the former Foreign Minister who is a member of the royal family, and that was a really informative visit. He was great, and helped explain so much about Kuwait.

We then went to the hotel where this big conference was taking place. It is a big event put on by the Foreign Ministry, and the Foreign Media are heavily involved. Over 90 countries are sending representatives, so we six from USFSP are in the mix. Our appointments for Wednesday began canceling because of this conference, so they are trying to include us. Getting us tickets may be a challenge since really high officials are being invited, and the Emir of Kuwait will attend.
