small, secretive forest species) being described yearly from South America (see recent issues of the Wilson Bulletin).

I recommend this book by Fuller. It will intrigue you as to what is known and the missed opportunities to gain more information about these species that are gone forever. If one can enjoy reading about extinction and man's inhumanity to wildlife, then Fuller has succeeded in his attempt to educate and arouse us. Currently over 240 bird species are listed as endangered in the "Red Data Book" (King, W. B. 1981. Endangered Birds of the World: The ICBP Red Data Book. Washington, D. C.: Smithsonian Inst. Press). In a grim conclusion to his preface, Fuller notes that the next such volume on extinct birds in 15-20 years will be too large for a single, comprehensive volume as this book, because "There will be just too many extinct species!" Let us hope he is wrong and the many endangered and threatened species, especially in Florida (e.g., Wood Stork, Snail Kite, Grasshopper Sparrow, Scrub Jay, Crested Caracara), will not be included in the next book on extinct birds.—James A.
